LARGE-SCALE ATTACK ON SUIYUAN BELIEVED TO BE IMMINENT

TIN AGREEMENT SIGNED

Control Scheme For Five Years

STANDARD PRODUCTION OF 197,000 TONS

London, Yesterday. The Amsterdam correspondent of the Financial Times states that the tin agreement reached in Paris on November 5 provides for a new control scheme, to run for five years from January 1, 1937, with standard tonnages agreed upon, to give a total standard production of 197,000 tons.

Siam has accepted the standard quota of 18,500 tons. She originally insisted on 19,000 tons, while the International Tin Committee offered 18,000, but Bolivia and the Congo offered to bridge the gap from their standard quotas.

The standard quota for the Belgian Congo was fixed at 13,000 tons, against the flat rate of 7,600 tons in 1936. The signatory countries are Bolivia, Malaya, the Netherlands East Indies, Nigeria, Siam and the Belgian Congo, while the adherents are French Indo-China, Portugal and Cornwall. The standard tonnages agreed upon for Bolivia, Malaya, the Netherlands East Indies and Nigeria hardly differ from those laid down in the original scheme.

As regards Siam a minimum production of 60 per cent. is laid down, in accordance with the Committee's latest offer, and this minimum will probably be extended to all the other signatory countries.—Reuter.

COLONEL BECK LEAVES FOR LONDON

London, Yesterday. — The Polish Foreign Minister, Colonel Beck, left Warsaw today for a four-day visit to London, to return the visit paid by Mr. Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, to Warsaw in the spring of last year.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

LITTLE RESISTANCE ANTICIPATED

REASONS FOR FLIGHT ANNOUNCED

NOT END OF THE CONFLICT

London, Yesterday. The Spanish Government has left Madrid for Valencia, leaving behind only the War Commissar, according to information reaching foreign diplomatic circles in London.

Later: It has been confirmed by official sources in London that the Spanish Government officials have left Madrid, leaving behind a Military Governor.—Reuter.

The flight of the Spanish Government to Valencia is expected to open the way to the easy capture of the capital. Nevertheless, the fall of Madrid is not likely to mean the immediate end of the civil war. The members of the Government are holding out in Catalonia, which is their main stronghold, as well as Malaga, Valencia and Barcelona on the east coast, Minorca in the Balearic centre, Bilbao and other isolated spots around Oviedo, and in the Asturias.

General Franco, on the other hand, has frequently declared that he will not permit separatism, such as the formation of separate Governments in Catalonia and the Basque provinces. He will therefore be faced with the task of reducing the outstanding strongholds one by one.

One of the results of the fall of Madrid, it has been suggested, will be that Germany, Italy and Portugal will immediately recognise General Franco's Government.—Reuter.

GOVT. STATEMENT

Madrid: The Government issued a statement before its departure from the capital, to the effect that

CONCESSION TO ITALY

Addis Ababa Legation Guard Withdrawn

London, Yesterday.

The Italian Government having undertaken to guarantee the continued safety of the British Legation staff and property at Addis Ababa, Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, was informed yesterday by the British Ambassador at Rome, Sir Eric Drummond, that the British Government had decided to withdraw the regular Legation guard of one British officer and twenty Sikh soldiers, as well as the party of 130 officers and men of the company of the 5th/14th Punjab Regiment, by which, before the Italian occupation, the regular guard was reinforced last year. About one month after the capture of the city the request for withdrawal was made, but the troops were retained as a precautionary measure for the protection of the British mission. The decision now reached is welcomed in Rome as removing one of the causes of friction between Britain and Italy.—British Wireless Service.

the removal of the Government was a temporary measure in order to save the Government buildings from destruction by insurgent bombardments as well as for political and military reasons.

With the departure of the Government the Militia is not likely to take up a spirited defence, and the insurgents are expected to enter Madrid without serious resistance. General Varela expects to march into the capital with 6,000 men this evening.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

Advance On Madrid Resumed

ANARCHISTS BEGIN TO PLUNDER CITY

Salamanca: The columns of the Nationalist troops resumed their advance on Madrid from Getafe and Cerro de los Angeles yesterday morning. By noon they had reached the military aerodrome of Cuatro Vientos, the military training grounds of Carabanchel and the Madrid suburb of Villaverde. The hastily retreating Reds offered resistance mostly by rifle-fire, and their artillery remained more or less inactive during the whole fight.

Red Militiamen captured by the Nationalists declare that the Communists and Anarchists have already begun to plunder the shops in the central part of the city. Grave fears are entertained here for the lives of the political hostages in the hands of the Madrid Government.

RUSSIAN TANKS USELESS
Berlin: The employment of Russian tanks, upon which the Madrid Government set a great deal, has proved to be an utter failure, says the special correspondent of a German news agency in an article from Seville.

The tanks used in the latest engagements were manned with Militiamen, since after the first defeats the Soviet crews refused to man the tanks. A close examination shows that the armoured plating is of very poor quality and hardly able to resist fire or grant protection.—Trans-Ocean Service.

YUGOSLAVIA AND BRITAIN

Trade Agreement Possible

London, Yesterday.

There is a possibility of the conclusion of a trade treaty between Britain and Yugoslavia in the near future.

A Yugoslav envoy arrived in London to-day for primary negotiations, and issued a statement to the effect that Yugoslavia is desirous of buying more British goods but is unable to do so until Britain has bought more from her than she does at present.

The country is now experimenting with a new German process for the manufacture of high-grade steel with soft coal. Hitherto Yugoslavia has had an abundance of iron ore but no hard coal, which is normally used for manufacturing steel. Should the experiment prove successful Yugoslavia will be in a position to become a great industrial country.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

RIOTS RESUMED IN BOMBAY

Two Killed And Three Injured

Bombay, Yesterday. Two people have been killed and three injured in a resurgence of rioting, which mainly took the form of sporadic assaults in the area of the recent riots. The police precautions have been tightened up.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

OIL COMPANIES INDICTED

Alleged Violation Of Anti-Trust Act

Madison, Wisconsin, Yesterday.

A Federal Grand Jury has indicted 24 oil companies and 46 individuals, who are charged with violating the Anti-Trust Act, alleging that they agreed unlawfully to fix and restrict price margins in charges to petrol jobbers. The persons indicted include Mr. Charles Arnott, Vice-President of the Socony-Vacuum Corporation, and the companies include Socony-Vacuum, Standard Oil, Indiana, and the Shell Petroleum Corporation.—Reuter.

N.E.I. NATIVE RUBBER

Batavia, Yesterday. The export duty on native rubber will be 55 guilders, effective from Monday next.—Reuter.

A message dated November 5 said that the native rubber export duty of 54 guilders would be effective from November 6. A message of November 2 stated that the export duty on all wet and dry native rubber would be 53 guilders effective from November 8.

On October 19 the duty was fixed at 51, compared with 52 on October 10, and it was raised to 52 on November 1.

MONGOL INVADERS WELL ARMED

JAPANESE INFLUENCE PRESUMED

ANTI-SOVIET BUFFER STATE?

Shanghai Yesterday.

The attention of the nation is focussed on Suiyuan, where the situation is reported to be critical as the result of an attempted invasion of the province by Mongol irregulars from Chahar.

The Chinese press reports that the Mongols who penetrated into the Paolin and Hsingho districts were driven off by Suiyuan provincial troops, but it is feared that a more vigorous attack is imminent.

The Chinese Government is closely watching the situation, according to despatches from Nanking, which add that the invaders are well supplied with large quantities of munitions as well as ample funds.

It is believed here that the fighting will be localised, as neither the Chinese nor Japanese Government is likely to intervene directly, but the Suiyuan troops are expected to offer stout resistance.

Chinese political circles interpret the events as an attempt to carve another slice of Chinese territory, in pursuance of Japan's plan to create an anti-Soviet buffer State on China's northern frontier.—Reuter.

"FAIT ACCOMPLI" IN N. CHINA?

CHINESE EXPRESS CONCERN

SERIOUS POSITION IN SUIYUAN PROVINCE

(From A Special Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.

News reached here to-day that Mr. Kawagoe, the Japanese Ambassador to China, will call on Mr. Chang Chun, the Chinese Foreign Minister, for the seventh meeting on Monday next to discuss the minor issues of the Chengtu, Fakhol, Hankow and Shanghai incidents only, while the major issues—the North China and joint bandit-suppression problems—will be held in abeyance. On the other hand, the Japanese authorities are reported to be again likely to adopt the fait accompli policy in North China that they so successfully did in Manchuria and Jehol.

General Gashiro, Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese troops in North China, held a military conference in Tientsin yesterday afternoon to formulate proposals for submission to General Sung Chi-yuan, Chairman of the Hopedai-Chahar Political Council, when the latter attends the dinner party of the former this afternoon. General Sung has, however, been instructed by the Chinese Central Government not to accept nor to sign any agreement with the Japanese authorities without the approval of the Chinese Foreign Ministry. Besides, the Japanese are supporting the Manchukuo troops under Li Shou-suen and the Mongolian bandits under Wang Ying who are invading Suiyuan Province from the north and west respectively.

INVADERS REPULSED

It is reported that Li Shou-suen is contemplating an invasion of the province from the North and not from the East as periodically reported in the papers. Strong Government detachments of troops have since been stationed in the east of the Province. The Manchukuo troops are at present assembled in Shanghai as their centre.—British Wireless Service.

INCIDENT AT KEELUNG

British Representation To Japanese

DISSATISFIED WITH ANSWER

Tokyo, Yesterday.

The British Ambassador, Sir Robert Clive, interviewed the Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Horinouchi, yesterday afternoon concerning the alleged mistreatment of three British sailors at Keelung by the Japanese police, and informed him of the results of the Court of Enquiry at Hong Kong. Mr. Horinouchi replied that the most careful judicial investigation had shown that the conduct of the Japanese police was entirely in accord with the announcement by the Government-General of Formosa. There was no wrongful behaviour on the part of the Japanese police.

It is semi-officially stated that Sir Robert Clive was dissatisfied with the Japanese reply and promised to submit details of the Hong Kong Court of Enquiry's hearing, and to take up the incident later.—Reuter.

They attempted to take Chingho yesterday but were repulsed by the Government troops of General Fu Chai-ye, Chairman of Suiyuan Province. During the last two days Manchukuo troops have been dispatched to the west of Suiyuan in order to help the Mongolian bandits of Wang Ying to invade the west of the province from Tulin. They were repulsed, however, by the Government troops.

General Fu has cabled a full report to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who is at Loyang, in Honan Province, and it is reliably and definitely learned that the Generalissimo has instructed the military authorities of the four provinces of Suiyuan, Shansi (South-east of Suiyuan), Shensi (South of Suiyuan) and Linghai (West of Suiyuan) to join together against the invasion by Manchukuo troops and Mongolian bandits which is backed by the Japanese Kwantung Army.

GEN. EVANGELINE BOOTH TO MAKE WORLD TOUR

London, Yesterday.—General Evangeline Booth, head of the Salvation Army, to-day began a world tour, during which she will visit India, Ceylon, Malaya, Singapore, the Dutch East Indies, China, Korea and Japan, returning to London next April via the United States of America.—British Wireless Service.

Unexpected Energy

The artist's conception of "unexpected energy" is perhaps based on that annual regatta between rival crews, for which one trains on Beer, the other trains on milk... and which the Beer drinkers have won successively for many years.

That same unexpected energy that is so evident in the Beer in your home countries you will find equally apparent in U.B., plus, of course, those wholesome qualities, fine flavour, and uniformity... all of which go to make U.B. "Beer at its Best."

HORLICK'S STIMULATES APPETITE

20, Queen's Road, Central, Hong Kong

ROBERT NOBLET had come to Dailac, in the Moi country, searching for that red earth which delights the eyes of tropical planters.

He had left his meager baggage in his riverside headquarters, and, having camped by the side of the interminable colonial highway, began to survey the surrounding country. Pleased with the land and the richness of its ferruginous soil, he thought of ending his wanderings and settling down.

But the Moi's behaviour was something he had not taken into account. They were a sullen people who seemed by no means anxious to put themselves out by encouraging a white man to settle near them. With infinite patience, Noblet addressed himself to the task of winning them to a more accommodating frame of mind. Alone and unarmed, he went every day to some village, bringing small gifts with him. He palavered for hours, exchanged the copper bracelets that signify friendship, and returned to his camp in the afternoon.

The wisdom of his course had produced immediate results. He was accorded a punctilious and ceremonious politeness. A whole back-country opened up to him, a territory overlooked in the Geographic Service's sketchy investigations, where an unknown population went peacefully about its affairs, protected by a nomad's land that guarded them from all approaches from the hated White Men's Road.

Noblet went out one morning, as he had done so many times, in search of adventure. He was sure of meeting with people wherever he went, and his pockets were full of cigarettes and glass beads for the chiefs he hoped to win over.

For three kilometers he followed the straight road that leapt, agile as an animal, from hill to hill. Its reddish trail ran on through the desert of burnt grass as far as the eye could see. The road was a warning sight to a solitary pioneer, a living witness of the thought and travail of so many elder brothers, numberless and remote, who had furrowed the world through time and space.

Noblet recognized the track he had found the day before, and turned in to it. He wore espadrilles, the customary helmet, short-sleeved shirt and khaki trousers. Light of heart and firm of limb he strode, fresh and young as the fresh morning hours. He gripped a stout stick. He was elated, filled with the joy that intoxicates men who thrust out into unknown country.

The early morning mists, pink with the rays of the still invisible sun, dissolved gradually. The endless veldt, dotted with puny greenish-black bushes, undulated in the breeze; the monotony of the landscape gave nothing of the quality of a primitive painting, without background or values. He felt as near the sky he seemed to elbow the horizon. In the distance a few thin clouds flamed. Clear, washed, limpid, and blue, the deepened. The sun rose.

The tall grasses sunned themselves in the heat of the new day; they moved now and then with little rustlings; lightly, quickly, an animal scurried. His man-smell, heralded Noblet's approach. Watched by creatures terrified at his presence, he kept his course through the silence of a hundred held breaths.

When the path wound through the jungle, a deafening hubbub began. The stifling heat of the moist, massed shadows of the trees brooded over an astonishing activity; strident sounds riddled the still air. The birds and monkeys, those impudent peoples, barely moved aside to let Noblet pass, and, as he went, took up their games, their songs and quarrels again with scarcely a moment's interruption.

And slow, ponderous and scorching, vast as the arena of vanished centuries, draped in its transparent winding-sheet of silence, the veldt stretched before him.

Now and then there were traces of man. The flanks of hills were sequences of burnt earth that contrasted with the foliage. Rotten thatch, scattered bamboo, clods of burnt clay, pink and red, bore witness to past inhabitants. Sprung from fallen seeds, a papaw-tree and a few pineapples and plantains flourished. In such places, not long since, wandering families banished from villages had set up their roofs; then, when the tiny yams had reddened and the maize was harvested, had gone a journeying again.

Noblet went on with mighty strides. Sometimes the acrid odor of dried grass was in his nostrils; sometimes the heavy smell of cardamom or the honey-sweetness of white orchids striped with mauve. His lungs expanded; a kind of drunkenness possessed him; strong in his freedom, mighty in his youth, he raised his voice and sang.

Later in the morning, from a hill, he saw a thicket of prickly bamboo. It was tender green in the reddish grass, at the end of a glen. He knew there must be a watercourse there. The path that took him toward it ran along a track that bore traces of wild beasts; the stream flowed through a plateau of volcanic rock. A light breeze stirred the bamboos; they creaked like the ropes of a sailing-boat.

Noblet sat for a moment in the shade beside the clear water, then crossed the stream by the beasts' ford, following the track. Soon he was plunged to his chest in tall grasses that split around him like water road moving ship, billowing behind him, to regain their immobility after long swayings. Then he passed beneath trees whose refreshing shadows caressed his skin. Alone in these limitless spaces, he seemed to bring with him a revelation of human sovereignty.

On his right hand, at last he saw a hut. He went up to the door showing against it in the manner of the natives, and asked for drink. With arm outstretched, seeking his direction, he asked in bad Moi—
"Village near?"
His host made a vague gesture.
"Euh... uh... Doun Tluoung."
"Come with me!"
When they had covered three hundred yards, the Moi set him on a new path, signifying with his hand that Noblet should go on alone.

"Yes, yes. Very near."
They drew apart. Noblet looked at him watch; it was ten o'clock. He would never make camp until early evening. Well, this time he would have to accept the unspeakable, saltless, badly plucked, ungutted chicken the chief of the next village would be sure to offer him, and borrow a horse besides.

After another quarter of an hour of walking, the path was crossed by a river; it continued on the opposite bank, much less trodden, narrower, with far fewer signs of use across the stream, where only a handful of creatures sought their food.

By midday, neither man nor house had come in sight. Suddenly, he lost the path.

Bent among the giant grasses, peering for the way, he came upon his own footprints. This was luck; for he had decided to go back, and now, it seemed, here was the path again, hidden beneath a mass of tall grasses blown down by a recent storm. But there was only the sound of the hard earth beneath his feet to tell him in which direction he should go.

The veldt was white under the straight-fung rays of the sun, and a few scattered, puny trees arose slowly from the unknown horizon. Their shadows were like the reflection in the sea of high, rounded clouds in a summer sky. Under the sharply-defined edges of this double illumination, a landscape void of life spread, as if awaiting resurrection. The horizon disappeared. Through the endless temple of colonnades and silent, the white man went more slowly, in the grip of an instinctive reverence, under the spell of the great immobile priestess, Solitude.

He came into a region of forest clearings. Suddenly, the tide of tall grasses retreated. On the short turf that succeeded them, in the deeper shadow of the trees, Noblet could find no trace at all of the path; but the hope of discovering another track bore him on, and he explored the terrain with minute care. It was in vain; and when, in disappointment, he decided to return to the starting point of his search, he could not find it.

His back thumped with nerves, as he covered the ground once more, losing his bearings completely. His legs were weak with tension. It was three o'clock. Dead tired, without food or weapons, he was overcome by a spell of faintness.

"Pull yourself together, old man! Keep your wits about you! Suppose you are a bit nervous and empty-bellied? Might as well admit it; but that doesn't mean the situation is tragic! Best is what you need! Sit down! Splendid! Now, a cigarette. The need he felt of reasoning with himself had made him talk aloud. But his weakness annoyed him, and he went on:—
"So you don't care for this sort of thing? Playing the fool and waving your arms! Well, you'll stay here half an hour, you hear? Thirty minutes, watch in hand!"

He began his wait. Heavy under the caisson of the sky, the earth slept, unbreathing. Objects trembled in the heat-bath, as if they were seen through the flame of a fire. But before fifteen minutes had passed he could endure the waiting no more; he wanted tremendously to be off, to find a track, to make his way out of this imaginary cage with its disappearing sides. Anxious to relieve himself of his self-imposed obligation, he insisted that his weakness had passed, that there was no justification for further delay. Half convinced of the merit of the argument, in which he was sure, fear slowly and methodically, and, satisfied to have overreached himself in such a manner, set off again.

Trusting to the benevolence of his lucky star, he took a definite direction, resolved to follow the first track he should come upon. He was still calm, despite the difficult situation. But the strong light made it impossible for him to search as he wanted to, and he grew weak; scratches, his feet were also, he was ravenously hungry. And he was obsessed with the terror of moving in a circle from which he would never escape. Time after time, the sun helped him follow a straight line.

At last he reached the veldt. For two hours, his eyes held by the hands of his watch, he scoured the weary plain with hastened steps and heightened anxiety as time sped by. While the sun descended slowly to the naked horizon, a vague uneasiness possessed him. Would a landy stroke of luck bring him to the White Men's Road?

He set off once more. Down below, suddenly a somber rampart of vegetation stood, setting bounds to the retreating horizon. It was the jungle. So, as the day ended, he was left with the choice between jungle and veldt; the one as hospitable as the other for a night's lodging.

More than ever now he wanted to find a track, the track that would take him back to men. It was the hope of coming upon it, a hunter's track, a pathway made by fruit-gatherers, perhaps that took him to the fringes of the trees. Feverishly, with bent back and wide eyes, he searched the ground. There was not the least sign. His head empty, his belly racked with pain, he leaned against a tree. Stupified, sodden, he could not make up his mind to take to the plain or the forest, but he imagined himself to be deep in thought.

Thirst brought him back to reality. Surely a stream sang a few steps away, under the brushwood. Stretched on the flat-rocked bank, he drank, bathed his face and neck, plunged his shod feet in the current. But it was a dismal respite.

A sound broke the silence. Uncertain of its reality, he held his breath, listening intently. Distant, dulled, a series of distant sounds followed one another quickly.

"A Moi woodcutter!"

He leapt up, trembling from head to heel. New strength possessed him. To find his way to the Moi, go with him to his village, ask hospitality for the night and be set upon the right track next day—what could be simpler?

Fatigue, hunger, confusion vanished instantly. A fellow-man was near. It was a revivifying thought, and as courage grew in him, the weariness and anguish of the day seemed like dreams. He bent again to drink from the stream, listened intently for the sounds, measured the high wall of vegetation with his eye, and forced a passage into the jungle as if he were pushing open the great door of a cathedral.

Braving snares and stumbling blocks, hidden tree-stumps, saturnine briars, low-hanging branches, unseen rocks, shadowed crevasses, worn out by two hours' heavy going, he went nevertheless light-footed.

Sometimes the sound of the axo died. Then motionless, breathing fast blood buzzing in his ears, he stood and waited. The sound began anew; it filled him with joy. The day's heaviness lifted; night descended, and its numberless creatures awakened and yawned. The jungle's poor humanity, the monkeys, unused to nocturnal orgies, clumsy at this late hour, and tired with the day's antics, leapt from branch to branch seeking a safe shelter from beasts large and small.

Noblet went on, swallowed up in the endless jungle, mantled with the gloom of the dying day; flayed, driven, he hurled himself against ever-recurring obstacles; he waded through swamps full of slimy mud, where ferns and little creases grew.

Now the sounds were so near he was surprised not to see the native. The noise was just a few yards off. But there was no one there. Very carefully he advanced again, crouched on his heels. Fearful even of the creaking of his bones, bending his body instinctively, he assumed the position from which his ancestors had leapt out the land in times of danger. Shivers like sea-ripples ran over his back, contracting his shoulders, gliding up and down his spine, converging in his chest, to lose themselves in his legs. Ten, twenty, thirty seconds he waited, crouching, in a silence that seemed like eternity. The sounds were not renewed. There was a sudden echo, brief and sonorous, and Noblet leapt from the ground and looked about him uncomprehending. Now the sounds were retreating, behind him. Surely he followed them. Three blows resounded, clearer and closer than ever, in the stillness of the increasing twilight. He peered with all his strength, hopelessly; he was still alone.

While he watched the treetops, three more blows rang out like shots. Above him, high on a branch, he saw a bird with half-open beak uttering its night-call. His last hope gone, he understood the vanity of all thought, all decision, the uselessness of courage; a tide of fragmentary thoughts rose in him. Now he lacked more than much as a hope that his needs might be satisfied; he crouched unmoving, his arms inert, his eyes wandering.

"What's the use?" he answered himself. "What on earth's the use?" He sat sunk on his legs, his head bent, his eyelids heavy; his arms sagged as if they were filled with sawdust. Overcome with weariness, he gave up the struggle. His body's commands could go unheeded no longer. He stretched himself on the ground.

"Sleep, that's all; I don't care where! I don't give a damn where!" Over the free horizon of the veldt, melted in the copper mists, the sun's last rays hung like gilded banners in the sky. Here, under the shadowing trees, where increasing gloom heralded an end of daytime security, the terror of the coming darkness goaded the beasts into vigilance. It was a fearful world's ending that renewed itself each night.

The heavy weight of silence awakened Noblet. His ears were empty, his eyes were drowned in shadows; his breathing seemed to be the only sound in the world and he himself the one survivor on a dead planet.

"The night, the night," he murmured. He could not understand his words. It was like talking in a foreign tongue. The words flew from him, vanishing—senseless, meaningless bubbles of sound; his mind could not follow them.

HE heard a noise of singing. At first it was timid, intermittent, then swelled into a mighty chorus. The birds were saying their and or quarrelsome good-nights. Each kind gathered together, looked to see if all were there, waited a little for late-comers, and moved off together in thick flight, soon lost in the blue peace on the empty sky. When all had flown, their prince, the peacock, last on his branch, sounded his rattle-throat cry. Silence dwelt again in the sky and the dusk grew deeper. Darkness had almost closed upon the zenith when a lost deer began to bellow. A roar, sharp and clear, followed its cry. It was the tiger, pursuing. He grasped the meaning of the roar.

Fear pushing him on; he set off without knowing where his steps were tending, but aware that he must go, and that he must give blustering warning of his presence.

Soon he had himself in hand; he reasoned that he would be wise to await the rising of the moon, for the most dangerous part of the night was still to come.

He struck a match to look at his watch, but it had stopped; the last thread that bound him to civilization was snapped. Now nothing distinguished him from a savage but his ignorance of the jungle and his civilized uselessness.

It was not so easy to remain still. Inaction made his skin itch. He wanted to move on, yet a stronger impulse stayed him. But he realized the true nature of the impulse and decided to go on, for he was fearful that he would be unable to overcome it if he delayed.

Unseeing, his stick held out before him, a hand protecting his face, he went; heavy, unbalanced, raging and cursing when he felt brave enough—making as much noise as he could.

After having lain dormant all his life, instinct, that sixth sense of wild creatures, revived in him. He knew that animals watched him from the deep shadows. The supple creepers that caressed his face with cold wings, the cries, the growls, the whistling, the calls, the moans, the howls on every side made him stiff with fear.

He groped along, dragging his worn-out espadrilles; their soles were gone. He lost his footing and tumbled to the bed of a dried watercourse. It was a lucky fall, he thought. Under its arches of verdure, the river bed gave him a sense of security, and set him in a definite direction. Now and then masses of ferns, like thick screens of lace, arose along the pebbly path. He bent them down with his stick, stunning himself with the noise he made. Into this tunnel, where the moisture of vegetable decay stagnated, the coolness of the night could not come. Very rarely there were gaps in the leafage, and he caught glimpses of a fiery sky. The moon must be large and red. It struck his mind with the dazzling precision of lightning; he knew that he was being followed—that it was following him.

Petrified, hair on end, he felt strong enough, nevertheless, to control his flashing intuition; he would turn half about, to see, to make sure. Yes—he could—he would!

Slowly, carefully, he pivoted. Fifteen paces away, two glittering eyes stared. He staggered. Terror hung before his face, scorched him with its flame. "I am falling! I am falling! I mustn't! I mustn't!"

The noise of a tremendous scuffling broke on his ears. He dropped his stick, his hat fell off; he began to run desperately, a straw borne on a wind of panic. His joints were sore, his knees bent with fatigue, but he ran, backed, he fell. "No, that's all! No more! I can't! Get it over with, quick! quick!"

His closed eyes danced in a chaos of stars. He wanted to supplicate, cry mercy, howl aloud. But he choked, his throat was stuffed. His arm held about his face, he waited... He waited... an infinity.

Childishly, with all manner of superstitious precautions, just as if he were playing hide-and-seek, he dared at last to raise his head and see.

FOUR YEARS WITH ULCERATED STOMACH

Now feels "different altogether"

If you endure the terrible agony of ulcerated stomach—or if you have suffered from the pain of other gastric ills, flatulence, wind, indigestion—you will understand the joy with which Mr. W. H. H. wrote this amazing letter:

"For nearly four years I have suffered from ulcerated stomach. I am a waiter, so you can understand how I have suffered—on the go for 12 to 14 hours each day. Sometimes I could have screamed with pain whilst waiting on the guests. Each year I have had to leave my work as I could not carry on. Not long ago I got a bottle of your Powder and since taking it I feel different altogether."

This is typical of the letters continually being received by Maclean. Sufferers who had given up all hope, whom even operation had failed to cure, tell of the marvellous results they have experienced even from the very first dose of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder.

Follow their example, and be absolutely certain to ask for Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, the one with the signature "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on the bottle. There are inferior substitutes at lower prices, but they are not worth the risk to your health. It is never sold loose. Also in tablet form. If any difficulty in obtaining write to—Banker & Co., Ltd. NEW FORD V-8 BUSES

Large Order Secured
In Detroit

WHOLE FLEET PURCHASED

A single order for 500 Ford V-8 metropolitan buses has been placed with the Ford Motor Company by the municipally-owned Detroit Street Railway. This is believed to be the largest single order for buses ever placed in America. Deliveries are to commence within 90 days. It is expected that the last of the 500 units will be turned over to the railway company by next spring.

The buses are of a new type with 25-passenger capacity. The design was developed by the Ford Motor Company in collaboration with engineers of the Detroit Street Railway. Their aim was to provide a modern unit for low-cost, high-speed operation in heavy urban traffic.

Exhaustive Tests

Purchase of the large fleet of the new type buses was determined upon by the management of the railway company after exhaustive tests over the past two years of 331 Ford V-8 buses on the heaviest traffic routes serving the Detroit metropolitan area. At present the original fleet of Ford V-8 buses is piling up mileage at the rate of more than 1,000,000 miles a month. The first bus of the fleet already has travelled more than 120,000 miles.

Detroit is the centre of the American motor-car industry, and this purchase is a real tribute to the makers of Ford cars and trucks.

BUSINESS IS GOOD

Mr. Edsel Ford Is Interviewed

"Business is good in every country; better than in 1935," Edsel Ford, president of Ford Motor Company, said on his return from an inspection of the company's plant in Europe. Mr. Ford visited England, Denmark, Germany, France and Holland.

"Denmark," he said, "has shown the biggest increase on a small scale; Germany's business is 30 per cent. over 1935; England's is much better than last year."

THE WHITE MEN'S ROAD

The green eyes shone with implacable hatred, still at the same distance. The tiger was following him, then, as tigers do when they are uncertain about something. Perhaps he was hungry.

Noblet shuddered like a guilty creature at the sight of those eyes. He tried to stand up, but he could not, and terror redoubled within him.

He began to make his way on all fours, groaning, shaking with weakness, his knees and hands torn and bloody. He recovered so far, however, that he pressed down the blinding gulf that hung giddily before him.

He came to himself in the pink light of the dawn. Stiff with pain, he could not move at first. But the nauseating anguish of intense hunger forced him to rise.

The jungle was powdered with sunlight. It filled gradually with the confused, indefinable, and tranquil murmurs of the life of day. Noblet listened, and heard a cock crow. His stricken senses, at war with his mind, grasped the meaning of the sound, there in the slow dawn. Suddenly, furiously, like the last leap of a fear that has outlived its cause, hope leapt in him. A cock was certainly no wild bird! The thought gave him strength enough to crawl.

In the midst of a trodden clearing he saw a Mui village. In the serenity of the morning, ranged round the floor where the rice was winnowed, the long huts showed signs of life.

He crossed the enclosure, and stopped, trembling.

They came out to him. The whole community gathered together to gaze at this white man who could not speak but who devoured the raw eggs and bananas they gave him.

"Elanh?" he asked at last.

Then he slept.

A sturdy hand awakened him. He was being carried in a litter. A warrior shook him with rough joviality, and pointed to a spot in the distance. "Elanh!"

He saw the Road running out to the barrier of the horizon; the road, unending, winding, red; rolled in the silence of the void, more obstinate, bloodier, more human than ever, under the ardent perpendicular sun.

The White Men's Road.

He sat tailor-wise on his litter of branches, his throat full of little hic-coughs of joy; two tears trickled down his cheeks. He grinned stupidly.

AND IN CHINA TOO,

MR. COOKSON,
we try to carry out those policies mentioned in your letter!

The Ford V-8 tells its own story

WE DEPEND on the Ford car to tell its own story of value and service. For if the people who use our cars every day are not praising them, it matters little what we may say.

The last word must be spoken by the car itself. The owner who tells his next-door neighbor how his car behaves in actual service is the most effective advertiser.

A great many Fords are being bought these days on the recommendation of present owners.

Attention of Mr. Henry Ford

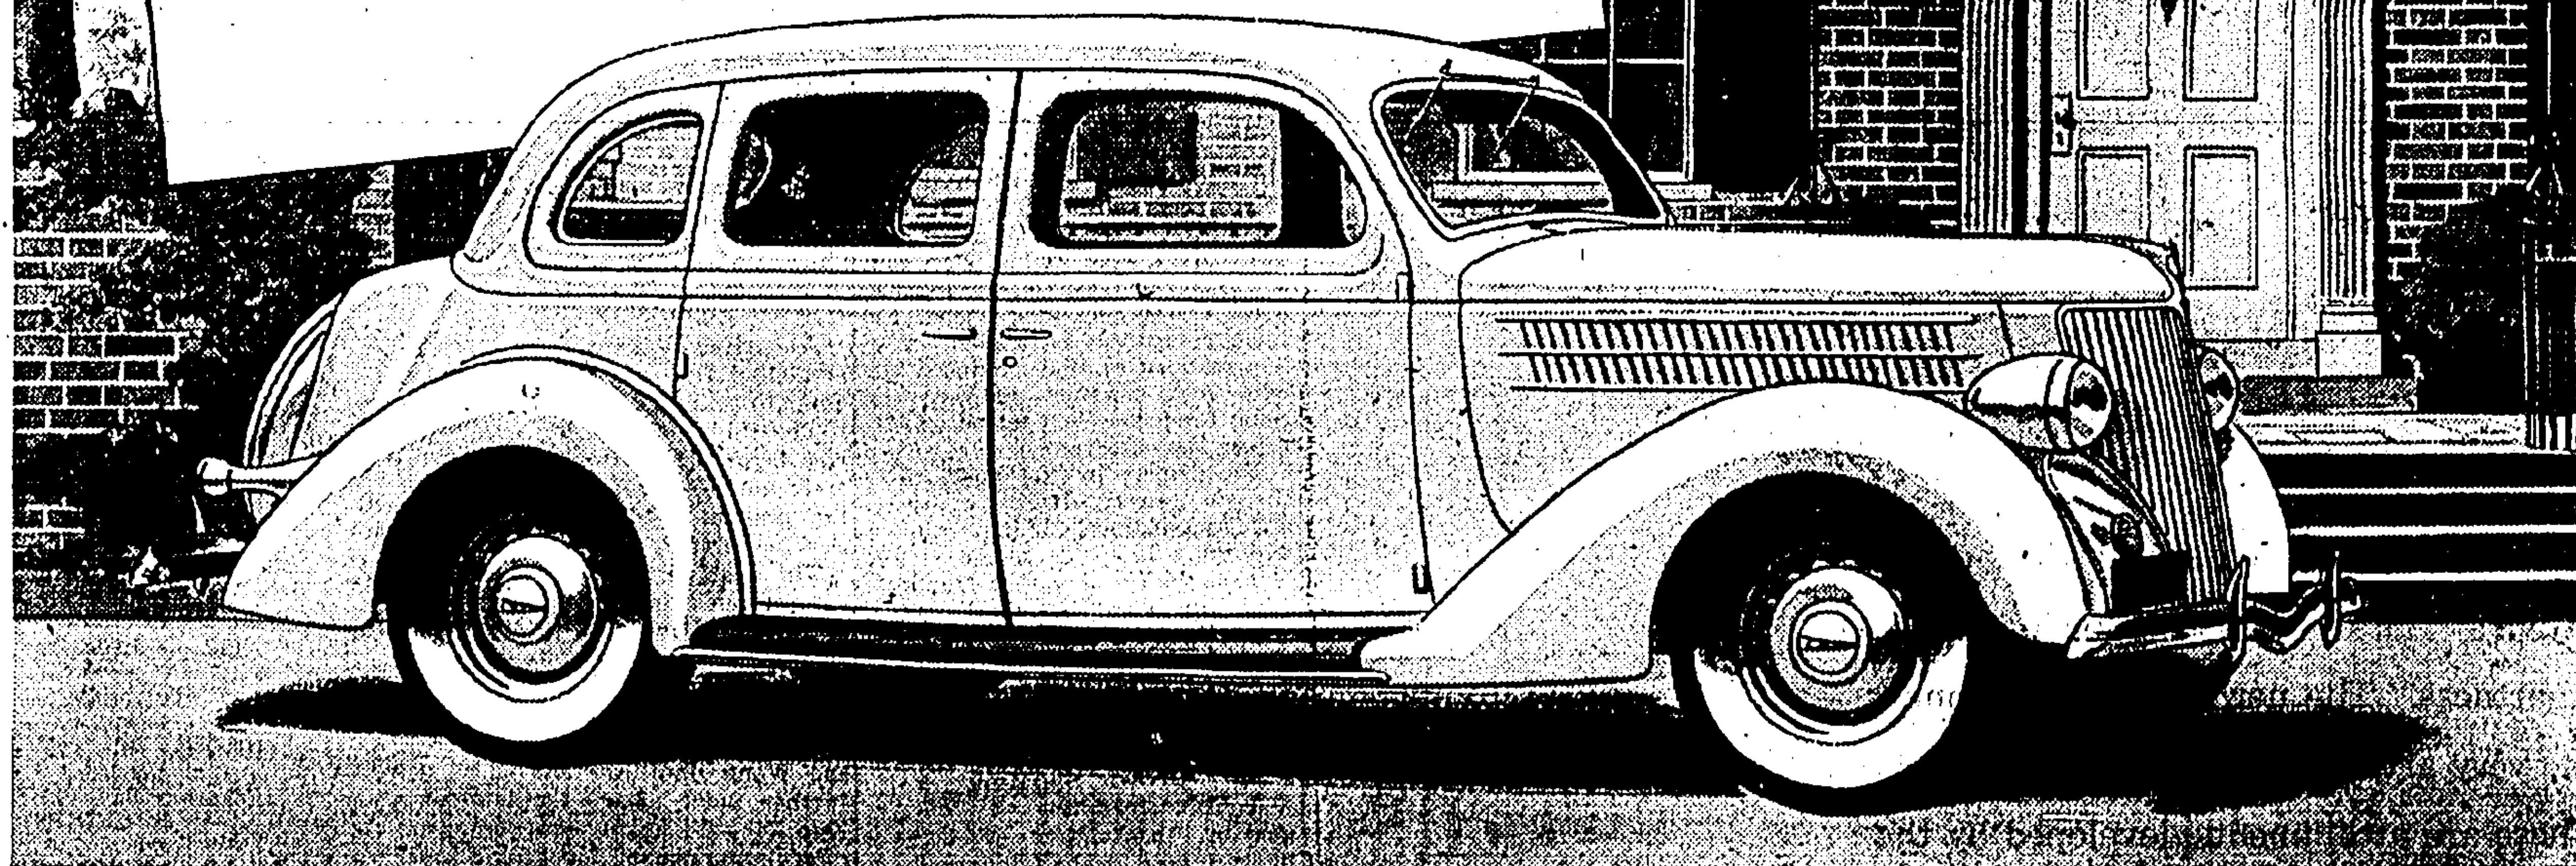

Gentlemen:

After driving one of your Model A cars for six years and getting exceptionally fine service from it, I purchased a V-8 which I have driven a small mileage and find it to be a very satisfactory car.

Both the Model A and the V-8 appeal greatly to what little I know about mechanical design. However, the greatest pleasure I get from driving my Ford is due to my respect for the general policies of your company, and the belief that the method of making and distributing the product is a beneficial one for the people.

Yours very truly,

EAST LANCS. ALL OVER SOUTH CHINA "B" BUT BEATEN 4 TO 1

WEAK CLUB TEAM WIN OVER ATHLETIC

POLICE FARE BADLY AGAINST EASTERN

RIFLES PROVE TOO GOOD FOR RECREIO

NINE GOALS FOR EAST LANCS. JUNIORS AGAINST MEDICALS

TO lose by 4 goals to 1 after enjoying fully three-quarters of the play was the fate of the East Lances at Sookunpoo yesterday when they opposed South China "B" in the premier League. Two surprise goals in the first 12 minutes of the game by the Chinese left the East Lances, high and dry for a while, but even after they had recovered from the shock and had confined the Chinese to their own half, indiscriminate shooting and a slow thinking centre-forward robbed them of many fine chances to level the score. The policy of the South China defence in packing their goal after an early lead did nothing to add lustre to the game, but it certainly had its compensations from the Chinese point of view — on the few occasions that the East Lances were on the mark their shots were smothered, and this rattled the soldiers.

With the exception of the actual scoring of the goals there was hardly a redeeming feature about this game. The East Lances, did practically all the attacking, but, with the exception of Sandford, at inside-right, there was a lack of guile in the forward movements and this enabled the opposing defence to interpret the play almost immediately a raid was initiated. The East Lances, have struck a bad patch just now, but they can extend the best in the premier division when on their game.

The right wing of South China "B" took part in a good movement which paved the way for the opening goal—Yeung Shui-yick crashing in a first time effort—but for the remainder of the game this flank was neglected. Chan Tak-fai further increased the lead within three minutes of the first goal, cunningly hanging back during a raid to seize on Lee Shok-yau's pass and flash the ball past Oxford in great style. Having apparently achieved what they set out to do South China gradually receded into the background and relied solely on defence to maintain their advantage, but, despite the growing ascendancy of the East Lances, the Chinese again scored, 10 minutes before half time. This goal was but Wong Wa-gay was exceptional sound in the Chinese goal, and it was not until just before the final whistle that Smith reduced the arrears with a terrific left-footed drive.

South China "B"—Wong Wa-gay; Cheung Chi-yeung, Leung Yui-chien; Tong Kwan, Lim Tak-po, Henry Young; Yeung Shui-yick, Yuk Hon-woo, Chan Tak-fai, Chun San-kam, and Lee Shok-yau.

East Lances.—Oxford; Swain; Steele; Thorpe; Crowthers, Eckersley; Smith, Sandford O'Donnell, Gorman, Tulley.

WEAK CLUB TEAM WIN

For their clash with Athletic at the Valley yesterday, the Club found themselves in quite a predicament, for, almost up to the appointed time of the kick-off, grave doubts existed about their ability to turn out a complete eleven. Nicholls and Fleming were absentees, but they eventually managed to take the field with a full side, Walkden and Sloan being called up from the reserve team.

Despite the handicap of playing men in unaccustomed berths, the Club gave a sparkling display of go-ahead and virile football to run out worthy winners by 3 goals to 1.

The Club had the encouragement of an early goal, as the game had been in progress only five minutes when Forrow registered from 25 yards with a surprise shot that gave Tam Kwan-kon no chance, and with this bright start, they set out to become a dominating force for the remainder of the game.

A short stoppage while Wilson received attention was followed by Forrow's goal, and then the Athletic centre-half brought Rodger into action with a nasty dropping shot and soon after the Chinese suffered a real misfortune when a drive from Chin Chifung completely beat the Club "keeper" only to rebound into play off the base of the upright. The Club increased their lead after 30 minutes, Ernie Strange tricking the Chinese pivot and swinging out a pass to the right to Fowler.

who raced ahead to cross the ball low over the Athletic goal where it was converted by Bickford.

A few minutes after the resumption, Syd. Strange brought Lee Take-kee down in the penalty area, but the Athletic failed to profit from the award of a 'spot-kick'—Rodger got his foot to Loo Koon-yee's powerful ground shot. Midway through the half the Athletic reduced the lead when Chin Chi Fung transferred to Hon-sang, who cleverly hooked the ball over Rodger's head when the keeper advanced. The Club retaliated and, from a corner by Fowler, Bickford deflected the ball into the net with a neat header.

Outstanding for the Club were Forrow, Drown, Walkden and Wilson and Fowler, who, when he had the ball, was one of the best forwards on view.

Rifles Beat Recreio

Although giving a somewhat disappointing display in the early stages of the game, the Rifles experienced little difficulty in securing yet another two points when they defeated Recreio by 4 goals to 1 at King's Park.

The Rifles laboured under a double handicap, being without the services of Doherty and Hartigan, while they appeared to find the cramped nature of the King's Park ground little suited to their style of play.

Ferguson was without doubt the outstanding man of the game, being ably assisted by Campbell.

Ferguson opened the scoring for the Rifles within a few moments of the kick-off, snapping up a pass from Erwin to net with a neat twist that sent the ball out of Marquess's reach.

It was not until their second goal arrived, Gosano netting in his own goal in an effort to smother a shot from Campbell, that the soldiers really found their form in the second half. The third goal fell to Moore, who netted from a free kick, and Ferguson terminated a run of ill-luck with a really excellent header that gave Marquess little or no chance. Recreio's only reply was through Gomes, who netted with a low fast shot that found Connor un-sighted.

Police Well Beaten

The Police showed up very poorly against Eastern on the Kowloon ground yesterday, Eastern claiming full points by four clear goals.

The Police halves, content to play a centre-of-the-field game, gave their wing men no scope, and Moss constantly found himself unable to cope with three or four opponents. Hence the nippy Eastern halves were well able to gain possession and feed their forward line. Harnessing their speed, the Eastern forwards carried out a very fine manoeuvre that produced the first goal, through Sabhan and Sung Ling-sing then scored shortly before the interval.

The display by the Police after the changeover, despite positional changes, showed little improvement and Sung Ling-sing scored almost at once with a shot that McHardy made but a poor attempt to save. Sung Ling-sing again found the mark from a pass by Chan Ping-to to complete his "hat-trick".

SECOND DIVISION

Erratic Shooting
A little steadiness in front of goal by the soldiers would have made a good deal of difference in the result of the game between the East Lances and South China at Sookunpoo, but erratic shooting on the part of their left-winger especially, resulted in a goalless draw.

The second half was notable for some excellent work on the part of Harmsworth, at centre-forward. He supplied Coster with particularly neat passes whilst Scullion was also conspicuous with several good efforts. The outstanding players for South China were Kwok Yau Loy, Yau Wa Hing and Choo Siow Hong.

Seven Goals After Interval
The Chinese Police had little difficulty in claiming full points from Eastern on the Kowloon ground, scoring seven goals in the second half without reply.

Chung Hing-wai, on Eastern's right wing, was very speedy and deserved much better support from his inside man than he received.

The Chinese Police scorers were Chan Wing-kan (3), Chan Chul and Yip Lai-yee (3).

Although a goal in arrears at the interval, the Fusilier emerged victors over the Royal Engineers by the comfortable margin of 3 goals to 1.

Woods gave the Engineers the lead, but the Fusiliers replied through Grindley (2) and Coakley.

Three Penalties!
R.A. Lyemun opened their winning account at the Valley when they decisively defeated Kowloon Chinese by 6 goals to 1. Strong half-back play by Taylor, Morton and Sparkes laid the foundation for their victory, and these three practically dominated the play.

In the first period Miles netted from long range, and soon afterwards Chau Chui Chuen had the misfortune to deflect a shot by Morton into his own goal. Just before half time Kowloon Chinese reduced the deficit through Chau Yuen Chong.

The second half contained much which is better forgotten, but suffice it to say that Knight successfully converted three penalties, and that Yau Ting Wai Kowloon's centre-half was sent off the field. Nash completed the scoring.

Rifles Beat Stonecutters

A keenly contested clash was seen at Chatham Road between the Rifles and R.A. (Stonecutters) and the score of 4 goals to 1 rather flattered the Rifles on the day's play.

Boyd scored the first goal for the Rifles and this was quickly followed by a well deserved goal by Wilson.

The best goal of the game, however, came from Gordon, who placed the Rifles three up with a splendid effort. Boyd netted the fourth. The Gunners then made a spirited effort and Baylor beat Barnwell with a well directed drive.

Club Outplayed

A spritely Athletic combination accounted for the Club by three goals to nil at the Valley.

The Club were a hard-working and dogged side who countered the fast moving Chinese team with any amount of determination, but they were sadly lacking in finesse. The Club's often hard-worked defence put in some fine work with Millington displaying good defensive form and Fogwell keeping well.

The Athletic scored twice in the initial half through Kwok Ying Ki and Wong Shui Kee and added a further point after the interval. Kwok Ying Ki again being the successful marksman.

THIRD DIVISION

Recreio Hold Liga

A very tame encounter was witnessed at King's Park yesterday when Recreio and Liga shared four goals.

Liga were the more polished side and were unfortunate to have to play three parts of the game with only 10 men, C. Santos being sent off halfway through the initial half.

Liga's two goals were scored in the first half through C. Santos and Gomes, Recreio's reply coming when Gutierrez netted during a goalmouth melee. The equaliser fell to Reis who netted a very neat goal from a difficult angle.

Win For Fusiliers

The Fusiliers outplayed the Engineers for the better part of their game at the Valley and yet, thanks to fine defensive play by the latter, only emerged victors by goals scored by Luxton (penalty) and Jones in the first half and Lorton in the second.

Nine Goals To Nil!

At Prince Edward Road, the East Lances, playing a high standard of football, completely routed the Medicals by nine goals to nil.

Harrison, the Medicals' centre-forward, played extremely well but lack of co-operation on the rest of his team's part resulted in all of his efforts being of no avail.

Hardy (4), Connolly (3) Jones and Grabban netted for the winners.

Hillier Injured

At Chatham Road, the R. A. F. snatched a point from Kwong Wah in the last minute of the game when a poor display of football ended with the teams sharing four goals.

The star man of the game was da Rocha, Kwong Wah's inside-left, who scored his team's two goals, after the R. A. F. had taken the lead through Elton, who netted with a powerful drive from the wing. Owen, however, received the ball from Bartlett in the last minute of the game and brought the R. A. F. on terms.

Hillier, the R. A. F. centre-half was carried off mid-way through the first half and this considerably weakened the team who, up to this time had had most of the play.

TO-DAY'S LEAGUE FOOTBALL

South China "A" Meet Fusiliers

Some very good League football should be witnessed at Caroline Hill this afternoon when South China "A", the present League champions and Senior Shield holders, meet the Royal Welch Fusiliers in what promises to be one of the fastest games of the season.

South China are fielding a team with changes in all three lines, Lau Mau being seen at left-back instead of Tam Kong-pak, who will be at inside-left, while Lau Hing-choi replaces Wong Mei-shun at centre-half. Ip Pak-wai will be on the left wing instead of Tay Quee-liang.

The following is to-day's programme:

FIRST DIVISION
S. CHINA "A" v Fusiliers (Caroline Hill, 4.15 p.m.)
Navy v Kowloon (Causeway Bay, 4.15 p.m.)
St. Joseph's v K. CHINESE (Sookunpoo, 4.15 p.m.)

SECOND DIVISION

Navy (Causeway Bay, 2.45 p.m.)
Ordnance v C. POLICE (Chatham Road, 2.45 p.m.)
SERVICE CORPS v European Police (Chatham Road, 4.15 p.m.)

TENNIS TOURNAMENT POSTPONED

The European Y.M.C.A. Tennis Tournament did not take place yesterday afternoon owing to insufficient entries. It will probably take place next Saturday afternoon.

The outstanding feature of the game being the fine work of the Army forwards, who dominated play in the second half.

Harrison opened the scoring with an unconverted try for the Army and just before the interval Cumming gave the Club their only points.

In the second half the Army forwards backed up splendidly and Harrison went over for Attlee to convert the effort. Just before the end Lucas went over in a favourable position and Attlee again made the try.

CLUB BEAT NAVY IN FAST RUGBY MATCH

Bidwell And Grieve Outstanding

BONNAR AND BUTCHER COMBINE PERFECTLY

Lack of stamina and combination among their backs, and driving force in their pack was responsible for the Royal Navy's defeat at the hands of the Club yesterday in their friendly Rugby match on the Causeway Bay ground, where the Club won a fine encounter by three goals, two tries and a penalty goal (24 points) to a penalty goal (3 points).

The outstanding feature of the game was the splendid understanding among the Club backs, whose inter-passing bouts were the best seen this season. Bidwell and Grieve are undoubtedly the finest centre-three-quarters the Club have had in several seasons, judging on yesterday's performance, and the Navy defence was left spread-eagled on numerous occasions. Chadwick and van Loowen lent admirable support on the wings, the former proving a shade too fast for any of the Navy backs.

Not At Full Strength

The Navy were not at full strength, Lt. Benson being a prominent absentee, although E. R. A. Evans, of the Hermes, who represented the Colony against the New Zealand Universities' fifteen last season, was in fine form at fly-half.

Much of the credit for the Club's success, however, must go to their halves, Bonnar and Butcher, who played splendidly. The former's clean passing from the base of the scrum and the latter's openings initiating many brilliant back movements in the latter stages of the game. Among the forwards Walkden, Watson and Bradford were again conspicuous, while Redman came into the limelight occasionally.

Harvey's Fine Display

Lt. Harvey and Gladding were the pick of the sailors' three-quarter line, the latter's defence being brilliant, while the former was magnificent in the latter stages of the game.

The Club opened their first half account with two tries by Butcher and Bidwell, both of which were improved upon by Watson, while Chadwick went over for an unconverted effort. The Navy replied with a penalty goal kicked by Harrison.

In the second half the Club went ahead through another fine try scored by Grieve, which Bidwell improved upon, while Watson scored an unconverted try and Bidwell landed a dropped goal from a penalty.

Club 1st XV.—P. C. Frost; H. van Loowen, H. D. Bidwell, W. E. Grieve, G. K. Chadwick; A. H. R. Butcher, J. L. Bonnar; K. A. Watson, J. S. Dunne; A. W. Holden, W. E. Peers, I. H. Bradford, N. E. Clarke, A. F. Walkden (capt.) and J. Redman.

ARMY "A" WIN

The Army, fielding a very depleted "A" fifteen against the Club yesterday at Causeway Bay, won a poor Rugby game by two goals and a try (18 points) to a try (8 points).

"Y" Ladies Forced To Share Two Goals H.K. Ladies' Juniors Trowned 10-1

THE Caer Clark Cup Ladies' Hockey League opened yesterday in brilliant weather with two surprise results, the "Y" Ladies and St. Andrew's Ladies sharing two goals in an interesting match in which the latter secured an early lead, while the Hong Kong Ladies beat Club de Recreio Ladies by only one goal on a very poor pitch at the Police Training School, Mrs. Prophet, formerly of the Central British School team, making an auspicious debut for the winners by scoring the only goal.

The Brawn Cup series produced only one upset, the Diocesan Girls' School outclassing the "Y" Ladies by three clear goals, Miss Helen Bockler being conspicuous throughout. The Central British Schoolgirls commenced their fixtures with an overwhelming win over the Hong Kong Ladies, winning by 10 goals to 1, the feature of the match being the sharpshooting of Miss M. Booker and Miss A. Martin, both of whom scored four goals.

The Caer Clark Cup Ladies' Hockey League opened yesterday with a very interesting match between the "Y" Ladies and the St. Andrew's Ladies on the former's ground at King's Park, which ended in a draw, the teams sharing two goals after the Saints' Ladies had opened the scoring in the first half.

The outstanding feature of the encounter was the splendid defence of the St. Andrew's Ladies, who combined well and cleared first time and without the least delay. In this connection Miss G. White was head and shoulders above the rest, while Miss J. Wong, in the pivotal position, also shone with some splendid spoiling, although she was inclined to wander at times.

The "Y" Ladies failed to settle down until after 20 minutes' play, by which time the Saints had already secured a goal through a worthy, but stoppable, shot by Miss Bockler, which passed through the "Y" full-back division and the goalkeeper, who made no effort to stop the ball!

Miss White Shines
Mrs. Rose, in the Saints' goal, had more to do than her opposite number and came through with flying colours, while of the four backs on display Miss G. White and Miss R. Stephenson, of the St. Andrew's Ladies, were certainly the best. Miss Fowler played a very erratic game and was inclined to top the ball practically every time she hit it, while Mrs. Burke was slow in clearing.

Miss Humphreys, at right-half, played a very fine and constructive game for the Saints, keeping Miss F. Wong well supplied with passes, while Mrs. Starbuck, the "Y" Ladies' left-half, came into the limelight late in the first half, from which period she was one of the outstanding halves on display. Miss Thomson worked hard in the home team's pivot position, but many of her passes went astray.

Poor Finishing
The "Y" attack did not fall into their stride until late in the first half, but the St. Andrew's line made it quite clear that they meant business and some fine attacking movements were witnessed early in the game. Poor finishing, however, robbed them of scoring chances until Miss Booker scored for from the edge of the circle.

Miss O. Dalsiel ("Y") and Miss F. Wong were both very good on the right wing, while Miss Westcott easily outshone her opposite number and scored a very fine goal to level the scores midway through the second half.

Mrs. Read Offside
Miss Marie Smith, who made her first appearance for the "Y" in the League, was very good and had hard luck following several worthy solo efforts, while Mrs. Read, in the leader's berth, worked hard and was a danger to the St. Andrew's defence throughout. She was inclined to wander, however, and spoiled several good movements by being placed off-side, Miss S. Dalsiel was not seen at her best.

Miss P. Gittins was the live-wire of the opposing attack and, but for lack of support, would have broken through on several occasions.

The game was full on incident and the final score is a fair indication of the run of the play.

"Y" Ladies:—Miss W. George, Mrs. Burke and Miss A. Fowler (Captain); Miss J. Lakeman, Miss E. Thomson and Mrs. Starbuck; Miss O. Dalsiel.

ARMY SMALL UNITS HOCKEY MATCH

The Army Small Units' hockey match between "C" Coy. East Lanes, and the 22nd Coy. R.E. resulted in a win for the former by 4 goals to 1. The winners have now entered the Third Round of the tournament.

St. Andrew's:—Mrs. Rose; Miss G. White, Miss R. Stephenson; Miss J. Humphreys, Miss J. Wong, Miss L. Jorge; Miss F. Wong, Miss M. Reza, Miss P. Gittins, Miss S. West, Miss J. Bockler.

Lone Goal Decides

RECREIO'S PLUCKY DISPLAY
ON POOR GROUND

A solitary goal by Mrs. H. Prophet, early in the second half, enabled Hong Kong Ladies to annex both points in their Caer Clark Cup encounter against Recreio Ladies on the Police Training School ground yesterday.

The state of the ground was deplorable—it was not marked and the drain cover near the touch-line constituted both a menace and a hindrance to the players, especially the wingers.

Recreio gave a creditable display and should, with more practice, develop into a good side. Individually, the players were good, but they were not accurate in their passing, while their forwards were slow in shooting and were often caught in offside positions.

The backs of both teams were good, and this accounts for the low score. Miss J. Smalley and Miss E. Grey were sure in their tackling, while the former cleared well under pressure. Recreio were fortunate in having good backs in Miss C. Osmund and Miss O. Botelho. Both were sure in their hitting and cleared well, but they did not move up with their halves during an attack, thus leaving a wide gap between these two lines of defence.

Miss N. Xavier had a hard time against Miss M. Smalley who, with Mrs. Prophet, constituted most of the danger, but she did well. In the forward line Miss C. Silva gave glimpses of good form, but was often robbed by the opposing centre-half, Miss Pope, who was the outstanding player on the field. Mrs. Harrop and Miss Marsh were prominent in the latter stages of the game, combining well.

The first half was evenly contested, with the Hong Kong Ladies having slightly the better of the exchanges. In the second half Recreio were the first to attack and Miss M. Reza went near to scoring when she just missed with a cross-shot. Hong Kong Ladies, however, scored through Mrs. Prophet from a pass from the right.

H. K. Ladies:—Mrs. J. Lunson; Miss E. Grey, Miss J. Smalley; Miss J. Dalsiel, Miss B. Pope, Miss K. Glover; Mrs. P. M. Harrop, Miss F. Marsh, Miss M. Smalley, Mrs. H. Prophet, Miss C. Ferguson.

Recreio Ladies:—Miss Z. Barros; Miss C. Osmund, Miss O. Botelho; Miss M. Alves, Miss E. Xavier, Mrs. L. Silva, Miss B. Remedios, Miss M. Reza, Miss C. Silva, Miss A. Alves, Miss M. Reza.

Brawn Cup

"Y" LADIES' BOW TO D.G.S.

The Diocesan Schoolgirls proved too fast for the "Y" Ladies yesterday, winning their opening Brawn Cup match by three goals to nil.

At the interval the schoolgirls were leading by two clear goals scored by their leader, Miss H. Bockler, who gave a brilliant display throughout.

The "Y" did not combine well, and failed to support each other.

Miss Bockler completed her "hat trick" during the latter stages of the game.

"Y" Ladies:—Miss J. Weller; Mrs. Slater and Mrs. Barnes; Mrs. Kemp; Miss K. Tonge, Miss McGowrie; Miss E. Holloway, Miss J. Sprick, Miss L. Murray, Miss P. George and Mrs. Imrey.

D.G.S.:—Miss J. Hall; Miss E. Chan, Miss S. Bruce; Miss M. Lawson, Miss P. Chan, Miss P. Dodd; Miss Eva Chan, Miss Mabel Chan, Miss H. Bockler, Miss S. Roberts, and Miss B. Fitzgerald.

Johannesburg, November 2.—An American promoter with the South African sports authorities has approached Tilden and Vines inviting them to extend their tour to South Africa.

C.B.S. CHALK UP 10 GOALS

The Hong Kong Ladies collapsed badly before the Central British Schoolgirls yesterday, when they were beaten by 10 goals to 1 in their Brawn Cup fixture at the Central British School.

The Central British Schoolgirls monopolised play from start to finish. Their forwards, who were led by Miss A. Martin, supported each other excellently, with the exception of Miss P. Baxter, who was a little slow on the right wing.

Miss M. McCaw, the winners' pivot, distributed intelligently, and held her opponent well in check. The schoolgirls' backs, Miss M. Fraser and Miss H. Martin, were very strong in defence, although the latter could put more power behind her clearances.

The Hong Kong Ladies lacked understanding, while their only outstanding defender was Miss E. Smalley.

Miss M. Booker (8) and Miss Martin scored in the opening half for C.B.S., Miss Locke replying for the visitors. After the interval Miss D. McCaw (2), Miss Booker and Miss Martin (3) brought the C.B.S. total to ten.

C.B.S. "A":—Miss G. Minut; Miss M. Fraser and Miss H. Martin; Miss J. Bockler; Miss M. McCaw and Miss C. Bone; Miss J. Parkinson, Miss M. Booker, Miss A. Martin, Miss D. McCaw and Miss P. L. Baxter.

H. K. Ladies:—Miss S. Baskett; Miss M. Sloop, Miss R. Smalley; Miss B. Pegg, Miss G. Swan, Miss V. Gordon-Smith; Mrs. R. R. Davies, Mrs. N. Davis, Mrs. M. Weir, Mrs. J. Locke, Miss V. Blackburn.

COMMUNIST RISING IN FRANCE?

SENSATIONAL REPORT BY PARIS WEEKLY PAPER

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.
A plot for an armed Communist uprising in France is disclosed in a sensational article in the weekly Gringoire. The article alleges that the Communist M. Marty, who was a former French Army officer, completed his plans for the organisation of the Communist Revolutionary Army this month. The plan provides for the utilisation of the so-called "Metropolitan Red Belt," i.e. the Paris suburbs, where the population is for the greater part Communist, for encirclement of the capital.

U.S. SHIPPING STRIKE

Movement Shows Signs Of Breaking

New York, Yesterday.
Hunger, fatigue and lack of money owing to exhausted strike funds are beginning to have an effect on the shipping strike, and there are indications of a break at Boston, where a number of seamen are returning to work. In other parts of the country, however, the deadlock continues and Government intervention is possible. A decision on this matter will be taken following conferences at Washington between the President of the Maritime Commission and Miss Frances Perkins,
Secretary for Labour.—Reuter.

A militant reply to Signor
Mussolini's references to Hungary in his Milan speech was

The paper adds that M.
Marty, who was until recently the representative of the Third International in Spain, was relieved of this 'post recently so as to be able to devote himself exclusively to the organisation of a revolution in France.

Funds of 10,000,000 francs, regarding the spending of which M.
Marty has reported directly to the Third International in Moscow, had been placed at his disposal, adds the paper, stressing that the strength of this revolutionary army in France must be estimated at about 80,000. For the equipment of this army the French revolutionary Communists are said to have ordered, through Switzerland and Belgium, 10,000 rifles, 3,500
revolvers, 1,000 sub-machine-guns, 750,000 revolver cartridges, 30,000
belts of ammunition for the submachine-guns, 20,000 daggers and 150,000 metres of telephone cable.

The paper concludes its sensational article with a warning to the public to be prepared for all eventualities, since the equipment of the army of revolutionaries will probably be completed in the course of November.—Trans-Ocean

THERE were many friends seeing Miss Heather Gerrard off on Saturday of last week when she sailed for India. She is going to stay with her sister at Rawalpindi. Earlier in the week Mrs. Stanton gave a farewell luncheon party for her. We understand it will be some time before we see Miss Gerrard back in Hong Kong, as from India she will go for a holiday in England.

An interesting visitor to the Colony at the moment is Count Bonarelli, from Italy. He came here from Canton and is staying at the Gloucester Hotel for, we understand, a short holiday.

Mr. G. Bowker, elder brother of Mr. A. C. I. Bowker, the well-known local all-round sportsman, passed through here early in the week on his way to Australia. Mr. Bowker was formerly with Messrs. Jardine Matheson and Company Ltd., but has now retired from business. He had just spent a holiday in Tsingtao.

Mr. R. Stock, sub-manager of Messrs. David Sassoon and Company we understand, will leave for Shanghai late in December or early in the New Year. He will be going to the Shanghai office, where he will probably stay for about six months.

THE Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith, the newly appointed Colonial Secretary, is due back in the Colony by the s.s. Comorin, which is scheduled to arrive here on the 26th inst. It is understood that Mrs. Smith and their daughter, Miss Mary Smith, are travelling with him.

Mrs. Drake, wife of the popular proprietor of Gordon's Shoe Shop, is due to arrive back from leave by the s.s. Aeneas on January 4, 1937. Mrs. Drake is on the staff of the Gloucester Hotel, being attached to the Accounts Office.

Miss P. W. Brown, the popular assistant mistress at the Central British School, will be shortly going away on long leave. It is understood that she will spend her holidays in England and Scotland, and that she will be away for about nine months.

LITTLE NOTES of Great Importance

Dinner for two finds you in velvet or crepe, ready to be that captivating and entirely charming person "across the table." That is, if you've visited MAIZEE'S, our American shop, beforehand. Their formal are the things to talk about, always outstandingly smart and lovely. Their dance gowns are the things of the season too... but I know you haven't missed that. And then the beauty problems... Helena Rubenstein solves these. You'll find all her newest achievements at MAIZEE'S side by side with the old friends you couldn't possibly do without.

It's really most possible to say that anything you might want in the way of books and stationery you'll find at BREWERS BOOKSHOP. But I won't go over that again—we'll talk about something new this time: Diaries, Date Books, Blotters, Address Books, Calendars... You'll find all those there in every shape, size and colour. Be sure to make your choice early—and don't forget what good gifts they make. You'll find them at the Kowloon Branch as well, 27, Nathan Road. And don't forget that BREWERS BOOKSHOP has the finest selection of gift stationery in town—large and small boxes, in all the lovely shades.

LANE CRAWFORD'S are showing the grandest selection of light weight wool frocks... just what you'll be needing now, and longing to have. Wait 'til you see them... to suit every type, size, taste. Their styles are original and different, their colours are so varied that whatever you might desire you are sure to find. Not only woolies, but silk crepes, light but warm, and ideally smart for afternoon wear. You'll find the smart new tunic lines, the flaring skirts and the squaring shoulders. Don't complete your Autumn wardrobe, or even begin it, until you've seen these frocks at LANE CRAWFORD'S.

Do you know that most children in hot countries have worms at some time or other? Nasty things that deprive the body of nourishment. A child with worms becomes thin, pasty faced and discontented, crying for no apparent cause and constantly irritable. Worse things happen too: indigestion, nausea, feverishness, grinding of teeth, etc. And the only thing to do is to give them WATSON'S WORM BONBONS, guaranteed to cure worms, and in doing so, acting as a tonic. They promote a normal healthy appetite, helping your children to be fat, happy and contented. And they only cost 3 cents each.

We're talking food again—but that's because we've just had some delicious Fruit Butter for breakfast. EMA Fruit Butters, so pure in flavour and such a decided improvement above ordinary jams. They are in a large variety of flavours and, believe me, they make a difference to a meal! There are EMA brand Jams, Jellies, and Marmalades as well, as superior in quality and taste, and packed in attractive glass jars that are an added decoration to the table. Give them a trial and you'll find your family enthusiastic. All the best hotels use them.

This competitor certainly hit upon a very original idea when he went to the Roman Fair half as a bride and the other half as a groom! ("Herald" photo).

Mrs. O. Hechtel, wife of the manager of Messrs. Huygen and Company, has come back to the Colony from a prolonged holiday in Germany. She has been away from the Colony since the beginning of the year.

Mr. L. Svendsen, together with Mrs. Svendsen and family, returned to the Colony by the m.v. Gneisenau last Tuesday after having spent a holiday extending over seven months in Germany. Mr. Svendsen is the manager of the well-known German firm, Messrs. Walbel and Co.

His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, was a very interested visitor to the Shek-O Golf Club last weekend. (King's Studio).

A VERY excellent film was "shot" at St. John's Cathedral last Saturday when Miss Irene Deacon became the bride of Mr. A. N. Braude of the Hong Kong Telephone Company, Ltd. Taken by the King's Studio, the film was shown privately during the week.

Mrs. V. C. Labrum, wife of the genial Hon. Secretary of the Kowloon Cricket Club, has returned to the Colony from England. She was accompanied by her son.

A prominent figure in Shaan-hai business circles, Mr. A. B. Henington is now in the Colony on a short holiday-combined-with-pleasure visit. He has made the Hong Kong Hotel his headquarters.

Squadron-Leader W. A. K. Dalziel and his mother, Mrs. Dalziel, returned last week from Japan, where they spent a holiday for a month or so.

Mr. Choa-Po-min, a well-known member of the Hong Kong Stock Exchange, and father of Messrs. Choa Wing-hay and Choa Wing-chiu, the two popular jockeys, left for Manila last week at very short notice. His trip is purely of a business nature and he will probably be away for a fortnight.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Compton have returned to the Colony after an absence of about six months. Mrs. Compton was seen in town last Monday, looking very fit and chic in a checked coat with black skirt and hat to match.

We learn that Mr. T. R. Rowell, formerly sports master at the Central British School but for the past year Acting Inspector of English Schools, will be going away on leave in the near future. He has been doing the work of Mr. J. Ralston who, incidentally, has returned from leave.

When the troopship Dilwara left Hong Kong for Tientsin, her passengers included Mrs. Drennan, Mrs. Crewdson and Mrs. Lowe, who are going up on a "round trip" from here to visit Peiping.

Madame Tsang, wife of His Honour the Mayor of Canton, Miss Doris Kotewall, the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall and the Hon. Comdr. G. F. Hole photographed at Queen's Pier last Wednesday. ("Herald" photo).

MANY local personalities figured on the screen early in the week when the moving picture, taken on the occasion of the arrival in Hong Kong of the Philippine Clipper, was shown at the Queen's Theatre. We saw the American Consul-General, Mr. Charles L. Hoover, making a statement for the "talkie" record of the event, while Messrs. T. B. Wilson and A. J. R. Moss were also included in the film.

The three children of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Compton did not return to the Colony with their parents who returned from leave a few days ago. They have been left behind in England, where they will be at school for some time.

Mr. Pedro Lobato, a prominent Macau lawyer, paid a short visit to the Colony during the week but he only found time enough to stay here for a couple of days, making the Hong Kong Hotel his headquarters.

LITTLE NOTES of Great Importance

St. Andrew's Ball! And PAUL RENNET'S have just received a new shipment of evening gowns, gorgeous affairs, and velvets among them. Isn't that all you need to know? You won't want to miss seeing these. And just in case you don't find exactly what you want, there'll be more arriving on the 12th. A swell selection—no doubt about that. And after-noon frocks and woolly suits, cardigans and jumpers—there'll be plenty of these too. Last, but not least new hats. They've arrived, but if you're not early you'll be too late. Better be early, I can tell you they're beauties, the models, real creations.

We've said before... and we say again... a good radio is like "perfect weather"—hard to find. And now we've found one, the 1937 Zenith, we're going on telling you how swell it is. It's the radio instrument born of 20 years' unbroken experience and leadership in building fine radio receivers. Visit the INTERNATIONAL RADIO SALES AND SERVICE, 27 Hankow Road, Kowloon, and learn for yourself. Servicing and guarantee after purchase goes with the 1937 Zenith, and your repairs are done by qualified British technicians who test your radios and tubes in your own home. Cash or terms arranged.

Amazing full values... in the most stunning styles possible are what you'll find in this cute shop... you won't believe your eyes when you see their new shipments... swing skirts and coronation sleeves, the exquisite wools and dressy silks, the evening gowns, striking velvet or heavy, swishing taffeta, for big and little too. The grandest selection of hats in town and fur coats that are a wise choice in styles that would pass with the most severe of fashion critics. And all in DOLLY VARDEN'S. You'll have to go early—there's always a rush on there.

You don't wear a bathing costume that covers your knees, nor do you wear flannel petticoats... And simply because you're a modern woman, do you know every new idea that's been created about beauty? Ten to one you do, and ten to one you know all there is to know about the BONCILLA preparations at the GRAND DISPENSARY, the Nourishing Cream, Cleansing Cream, and All-purpose Cream. They're something every really modern skin must have! So if you're the one in ten, just take a lesson from those who know—use BONCILLA and be sure of a lovely face and lovely hands.

Don't be among those saying in a week or two: "I want to give a present like this or that Mrs. So and So bought at the JADE TREE." Be there nice and early yourself and pick from the new stock of gifts. You'll find all and more to please those at home... fascinating gifts with a rich and truly Oriental flavour. Mandarin coats, kimonos, Chinese rugs, vanity boxes, hand carved costume jewellery, specially designed hand embroidered evening bags to match any dress... And they're all personally selected by Mrs. Wood, so you know they'll be unusual, different, something only to be found at the JADE TREE.

FROM HERE AND THERE

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lewis and family are expected to return to the Colony from Home leave towards the end of the month, having been away since February. Mr. Lewis is in the Statistical Department of the Imports and Exports Office.

Mr. P. K. Hoe, managing director of Messrs. R. Corney and Company, has again taken over active control of the Company's business, having returned from Australia with his family after a most enjoyable holiday.

Mr. A. Ritchie, who is attached to Messrs. Palmer and Turner, Shanghai, passed through the Colony last week on his way to India and stayed here for a couple of days.

Messrs. P. C. Frost, W. Schnabel and E. P. Humphreys, were the hosts at a very successful party at the Gloucester Hotel on Wednesday of last week. There were about 20 people at the party and everyone voted it a complete success.

Mr. Paul Tehang, a prominent French business-man, arrived in the Colony last week and took rooms at the Hong Kong Hotel. It is understood that he will stay in the Colony for some time and then go up North before returning home to Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Burridge, together with their little daughter, have taken up residence at the Hong Kong Hotel. They will stay here for about a week or so before proceeding to England on leave.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Griffin, who were here on their honeymoon a few weeks ago, have returned again and will stay here for another month before returning to Australia. They have just been visiting Shanghai and Japan.

The many friends of Mr. George Fowler will be interested to learn that he got married in England while on his holidays. He is due to return to the Colony shortly but is not, we understand, bringing his bride back with him. She will be coming out later.

The Misses Stella and Helen Ho, who danced in a trio ballet with Miss Peggy Stringer at Miss Violet Capell's Dancing Display early in the week, have figured in the displays for many years. They first took part as juniors and have "danced their way up to the front ranks."

Mr. R. Hansen of the Great Northern Telegraph Company, arrived in the Colony during the week and stated that he will be here for "another few days." He first of all registered at the Repulse Bay Hotel but has since "moved out" to the Hong Kong Hotel.

Miss E. Hardisty-Smith, of Vancouver, was amongst the passengers who arrived in the Colony by the R.M.S. Empress of Canada. They will stay here for about a month, and, like so many of the people who arrived here during the week, they have taken up residence at the Hong Kong Hotel.

The agents of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada held their annual party last Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Paton placed their country residence at Taiipo at the disposal of the staff. Amongst those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. McBain, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Tape, Mr. and Mrs. D. O. de Silva, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Whitham, Mrs. A. Carvalho, Miss Noronha, Mr. Albert Chan and Mr. A. H. Lam-mert.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Little arrived in the Colony by the m. v. Gneisenau on Tuesday last and stayed here for a few days. They are a very popular couple in Manila and are now on their way to Europe, where they will spend their leave.

Mrs. Wagner, who is popularly known here, passed through the Colony early in the week on her way back to Japan after spending a holiday in Germany. She is the wife of the German Consul-General in Osaka, and it will be recalled that Dr. Wagner was stationed here, and then in Shamsen, Canton, some years ago.

Xmas Present Problem Made Considerably Easier

It seems early to be thinking about Christmas presents but not for our people at Home, and a very easy and efficient method of presenting such friends with suitable gifts has been brought to our notice.

Messrs. John D. Hutchison have made arrangements with Messrs. J. S. Fry and Sons, the well-known chocolate manufacturers, and also with Messrs. Crosse and Blackwell, well known for soups, condiments etc., to deliver your greetings in very tangible form to your friends just before Christmas without any trouble regarding custom duties.

The presentation boxes of chocolate are in many varieties and a selection may be made from a coloured folder, while Crosse and Blackwell offer two varied collections of their famous products in neat suitcases.

Full particulars may be obtained from Messrs. John D. Hutchison and Co., King's Building, but it is essential that your order, together with your cheque for the value of the goods selected, reaches them by November 12 in order to guarantee delivery before Christmas Day. Any cards you desire to enclose as greetings should accompany the order.

FOOD "WASHED" WITH PURE AIR

Constantly Circulating in the Modern Air Conditioned Refrigerator

Certain stored foods pass off impurities, unpleasant in odor, which are quickly absorbed by other foods. Thus food, to remain impurity-free and to prevent decay, must be kept in air that is constantly purified as well as chilled. Cold alone is not enough!

The new OLYMPIC ICE Refrigerator, utilizing SIX-SIDED REFRIGERATION, keeps vitalized fresh air constantly circulating around your food. It "picks up" odors and impurities, carries them to the melting ice film, where they are absorbed and eliminated through the drain pipe. Food odors cannot interchange!

Too, the new OLYMPIC Air Conditioned Refrigerator maintains the correct balance of moisture in the air, preventing foods from drying out. Foods retain their natural flavors, juices and vitamins.

Our Ice Service Man will gladly demonstrate the new OLYMPIC Refrigerator.

Our Canton Guests

THE visit of His Excellency the Governor, and the return visit of our guests from Canton who have now left us with mutual expressions of the most cordial goodwill are the realisation of a hope that has been long entertained, and the only comment to be made is that there should be no failure on our side to press forward to accomplishment all the good impulses that were expressed in the admirable postprandial speeches. In that remark there is no cynical intent. The very discouraging results of similar fraternisation in recent years referred to by Sir William Peel in a recent speech in London were all that could be expected from the gangster administration that was busy feathering its own nest during Sir William's term of office. In practical government the man is everything, and a complete change of conditions can be expected from a complete change of men. In any case a Government is like an individual in this, that it tends to live up to the standard that is expected from it.

For several years we have consistently preached the gospel that trade is simply an exchange of goods that the seller can do without for goods that the buyer wants, and accepting in payment such goods as are wanted. Prosperity means the possession of a sufficiency of what a man wants, and he ought to be left to find out for himself where he can buy them to the best advantage. Taxation is, alas, a necessary evil, but the idea that there is any benefit in unnecessary taxation is a mirage. The income that is collected and not applied to useful public objects does actual harm, for it goes into the pockets of the wrong sort of man. Half the intricacies of economics and the dislocations of commerce would be avoided if the rules of administrative policy were kept on the simplest possible lines, with the utmost publicity of statement of revenue and expenditure.

The other primary condition of fair and beneficial exchange is a stable money which will ensure that when payment has been made on a contract it will be made in money of the same value as was intended when the contract was signed. The new national coinage has been making steady progress. The variations have been within the range of 1 per cent. during the past year—in fact much less—and that represents a steadiness which is above the standard of the big currencies taken as a whole. The silver reserve of over 60 per cent. is far above what bankers hold to be essential, and the notes in circulation have increased by more than 300 million yuan. The result of the Presidential election in the United States is all in favour of stability.

China still has an unfavourable trade balance, but it has been reduced by two-thirds, and in the absence of any new Tuchus to disturb the quiet countryside, should entirely disappear in the next six months. Once China is able to pay the interest on its railway and other bonds there will be no lack of enterprising investors to carry out schemes that will increase wealth as rapidly as the Tuchus destroyed it.

In future histories it is quite possible that the tour of Sir Frederick Leith-Ross will be marked as much more important than was admitted at the time—outside of Japan. In Tokyo there was an immediate recognition of the fact that nothing could do so much to unify China as sound finance based on a coinage that was controlled in the interests of Chinese trade instead of being tied up to silver after silver had become unreliable. The attempt to sabotage the new national currency by encouraging smuggling in the North and general obstruction has only succeeded in arousing a new national loyalty which is one of the best auguries of revival. Nothing was more promising for a new era than the fact that the attempt of the senior officers to set up an opposing domain in the Kwang Provinces was defeated by the refusal of the junior officers to fight against their fellow countrymen.

In Hong Kong, while we are still waiting for the expected growth of imports and exports, we have at any rate achieved a steady dollar. What else is there that we can do? Occasional visits of ceremony will not serve our purpose, for these problems with chances of friction are matters of daily business. We ought to lose no time in carrying out Sir Frederick's suggestion, referred to at the Chamber of Commerce by Mr. Ho Tsah-ping, that the Chamber of Commerce of Hong Kong and Canton should organise a Permanent Trade Commission on the model of that which exists in Shanghai. Nothing else will serve to keep to mind the permanent identity of interests of the two ports.

Hong Kong Personalities

Continuing the exclusive series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Konyi, the talented Hungarian artist.

OUR personality for to-day is Mr. Victor Hugo, the popular manager of the Oriental Theatre, who may be best described as "the most popular figure in the 'show' business in Hong Kong."

Mr. Hugo was born in Toledo, Ohio, and it was in his home town that he received his education. He was at first apprenticed to a watchmaker and jeweller, but about that time there was a magician in town, and, as magicians in those days had to make their own magical apparatus, this one asked young Hugo if he could help him with a few odds and ends. It is part of Mr. Hugo's life history that he not only made these gadgets, but he did his job so thoroughly that everything ordered by the magician was done in duplicate, the maker himself keeping one for his own personal use.

After a short period, young Hugo told his father that he felt he could make $40 a week by going into the show business instead of earning $15 with the watchmaker and, to use Mr. Hugo's own words, he was "promptly marked down for execution!" Nothing, however, could prevent the young magician from following his desires and he ran away from home, only to be taken back by an irate father. He ran away again, and he did this so many times that his father at last let him have his own way. He was America's greatest boy magician for two years, but at the end of that time he realised that he could make more money by engaging magicians to work for him than by working himself. One of his first magicians was Carter the Great, whom he sent on a world tour with his brother as manager. Then there were Nicola, Dante, who was then known as The Great Jansen, Le Roy, Talma and Bosco, all three from London, Chelato and Palermo and a host of others.

In 1911 Mr. Hugo sent a coloured minstrel show to Australia, the company consisting of 35 people. This proved a great success, but in 1913 a big disappointment came for Mr. Hugo, who was preparing a circus to take "Down Under" but which could not make the trip as arranged owing to the fact that war had broken out. Everything had been prepared for a gigantic tour, and Mr. Hugo, with all the artists and animals on hand, had to tour the country instead of going to Australia.

In 1925, however, Mr. Hugo took a Wild West Show to Japan and Singapore, and it is interesting to note that they played five-and-a-half months in Japan. It was not until 1932, however, that Mr. Hugo landed in Hong Kong, having come from Shanghai after the trouble had broken out that year between the Chinese and Japanese. Upon his arrival here, Mr. Hugo opened up the Garden Theatre on the site now occupied by the Southern Playground, but after the summer season he sold it, and in January 1933 he joined

THE PASSING HOUR

BY A.N.M.

THE Rotary Club was performing its most useful function when it invited Mr. Mayne Elson to give an account of the Toc H movement. The Club has had many interesting addresses from residents talking about their own special lines of business, but after all we usually know our own neighbours and their views pretty well. The Club, which has no geographical limitations, is the only medium by which passing wayfarers can keep us abreast of the non-official movements of sentiment and aspiration in the bigger world outside. It stands to reason that it is more difficult to describe a movement which is one of sentiment than to outline any of the new theories that are based on deductions from broad assertions of what are supposed to be new or newly discerned truths, which so often turn out to be but old truisms writ large. The Toc H spirit is all the better for having an organisation, but it is not in itself dependent on any organisation. Those who went through the war will have no need to have it explained, but what explanation can be given to those who did not?

WAR COMRADESHIP

IF this analysis of the sentiment of the circumstances as felt by the individual is correct it will be seen that it has nothing to do with the fighting spirit. Enlistment is back in the past, and carried with it all the subsequent consequences. The conversation of anyone who should talk as Mussolini has recently been talking would not be welcome. What the war-weary man wants is the very antithesis of that. He wants to feel for an hour or two that life is warm and happy, that men are really friends and comrades. It may be said, as has been said of the two minutes' silence on Armistice Day by some of the young people, that it belongs to the past, and will fade away and be forgotten. If the impulse to brotherhood really arose only in the hearts of those who were subject to that great stress of feeling, it is true that when they were dead there would be none of it left. But in fact, when the piping days of peace have returned, the soldier feels that he is indebted to his war days for a genuine religious experience which does not fade—it only wants a chance of expression. It is true that when he sits down to think he may want a lot of difficult questions, to be answered by the "ratiocinative faculty" which has created systems of thought and conduct that would have merely bored him "at the front." But these systems are explanations based on the foundation of what he feels was the primary thing—the vision and impulse of friendship in a new and concentrated form. Not a thing to be argued about, but to be felt. And it is very likely that he will soon feel that after all, in face of the vast complexities and the inevitable dangers of life even in time of peace, the difference between peace and war is not so great after all, and the inspiration of friendship is just as fine a thing.

FAMILIARITY WITH DEATH

THE gladiators who were about to be "butchered to make a Roman Holiday" used to be lined up in front of the Imperial box to give a formal salute "morituri te salutamus." They had little reason to be thankful to the head of the State who planned such bloody spectacles. But in their own minds the reasoning was something like this: "Here we are with so little chance of escape from death as makes no difference; let our last moments be marked by a dignified recognition of common humanity with all, even with him who has put us here." Human nature is full of strange twists and turns that reveal similarities in diverse conditions, and odd diversities when we would expect similarity. There is no need to labour any analogy, but the attitude to life of a soldier due for the front line trench in a day or two was much the same. Certainty of death is another thing altogether. Probability leaves room for high spirits—in

WHY A BRACELET?

There is primitive symbolism in the ornaments the 1936 girl wears.

WHEN Miss 1936 slips a bracelet on her arm, screws ear-rings in her ears, dons a head-dress before stepping out for a big evening, she doesn't realise that she's following an old primitive custom. But she is. For, through the ages, all over the world, jewellery has been worn by maidens on their entrance to society, to help them attract a mate. And our twentieth century modern—whether she knows it or not—is preparing for her party by adorning herself with the same significant glitter which the girls of Cambodia, in Indo-China, used back in the twelfth century in their coming-of-age ceremonies.

She'd be surprised, too, to learn that the very designs of her jewellery, which she believes are as up-to-date as Fifth Avenue and the Rue de la Paix can make them, follow the same symbolism of virginity, love marriage, fertility, as the ornaments worn in the Mating Dance by the dusky debutantes of Papua, Siam and Java.

The newest display in a Fifth Avenue shop in New York, for example, is a clever arrangement of flower clusters for the hair, made just like the ancient Cambodian flower clusters. At the same counter are Cambodian wristlets of jasmine flowers, and bracelets of filagree, and in a nearby shop is the duplicate, in massive silver, of the heavy bracelet in the form of a serpent—the symbol of fertility—without which no Cambodian maiden considers herself properly launched.

The banyan-leaf design—also a fertility symbol—appears in have in modified form by a French designer.

The smart new raffia bracelets so popular with sports clothes have a history, too. They're exactly like the bamboo bracelets worn by the girls of Papun, New Guinea. And the fashionable pendants in the shape of a double half-moon are also Papuan in origin.

From Java, Siam and Bali come exotic hair ornaments, bracelets, pendants, laden with symbolism. The wearing of flowers, fresh or artificial, at the side of one's head, was taken up in a big way this Autumn by the latest crop of debutantes. They wear fresh flowers in their hair in Bali, too, but there they know what it means. It's a definite sign that the wearer is ready for marriage. Balinese, too, is the ring with a single high stone, which a Fifth Avenue jeweller featured recently and labeled "Bali."

FASHION'S FOIBLES

American dress-makers' models appearing in split skirts and hobble skirts, were surrounded by jeering mobs. In small Southern towns, girls in knickerbockers were stoned. Police along the New Jersey coast were on guard to prevent their wearing one-piece bathing suits. But this was many years ago!

I Go To See The Seeress

THE seeress came to Hong Kong. She took a suite, unpacked her trunks, promptly fell into a trance and prophesied great events. She sounded not unlike the Delphian oracle. I had never seen a seeress before. I was intrigued. So I went to see the seeress.

A plump little man conducted me into the sumptuous suite. He bowed and capered, "Madame will soon be here." Meanwhile he put before me a dainty little glass of Cointreau . . . and soon I was just in the mood to listen to an oracle. The plump little man, with apologies, turned to a little side table where he set about mixing something in a cup. "A medicine for the nerves," he explained, circling his fat fingers before his forehead. "Just go ahead," I said. But he did not drink it.

A door on the left opened. I sat in tense expectation, but only a young Chinese appeared with a slip of paper in his hand, looking slightly dazed. The door remained open and I caught a glimpse of a gown and turban. A minute later the seeress was standing before me. A truly amazing figure, 6 feet 2 inches, 300 pounds of flesh in a Turkish cotton kimona. A face which must have been really handsome in her youth, deep grey eyes which she obviously tried to fix in a penetrating gaze. She sat down before me. The plump little man hurried to her with the medicine cup. "I have had such an excitable day," she said, "and this evening I still have to write some notes for my book."

The cast for "Make Believe," a play presented by old pupils of the Central British School. ("Herald" photo).

"Oh, so you are writing a book?" I queried.

"Yes, that's why I made this dreadful journey to the East again."

"Well, don't you like Hong Kong?" I asked.

"I'm crazy about Hong Kong."

"And the Chinese women," I asked, "you like them?"

"Lovely," she said.

"What sort of things do they ask you about?"

"Love . . . and still love. Money . . . and again money."

Probably the main interests of the average women all over the world, I reflected.

"And many more women come to see you than men?" I asked, thinking that women would naturally be the more superstitious.

"Oh no!" she exclaimed, "many more men, wherever I go." A big surprise . . . one always learns.

"I only wish the Chinese women would stick to their national dress," she went on, "but I suppose the movies have their effect here as well as everywhere else in the world. And sport . . . oh, a woman can play a little tennis and do a little writing—but flying? No! A woman must be feminine."

"But what," I asked, a little overcome, "is the difference between flying and any other form of sport?"

"Oh there is a great difference," she said. "A woman shouldn't try to do anything masculine. And anyway what is the use of flying? Haven't we got steamships and trains? For my part, I would never travel in an aeroplane . . . I would never know when it was going to crash."

"The modern woman is no longer fit for marriage; even before she is married she is wondering when she is going to be divorced. In some parts of the world the woman is of no interest either personally or socially unless she has been divorced two or three times. Just a little while ago a European woman came to me in Rangoon; she was 27 years of age and had already been divorced six times. She had just been married to her seventh husband for two days when she came to me asking when she would be divorced."

"And did you tell her?"

"I did," she said, "but I really don't know why they do it."

"Yes, a woman must be feminine. She must find her main interest in her children. But I don't like the Chinese habit of adopting children. I was not predestined to have my own children, but though I am crazy about children I would never adopt one — one never knows how it would turn out. I have no children," she added coyly, "but I have five dogs."

"Have you brought them with you?" I asked.

"Not this time, but I have Zauzi with me. I would never go anywhere without Zauzi — my turtle . . . Zauzi! . . . Zauzi! . . . And she came back holding in her hand a tortoise, quite unafraid, waving its head and clinging to her fingers with its little claws."

The time came to go. "When are you leaving Hong Kong?" I asked her.

"Now you are asking me too much," she said, "that is the only thing I don't know. You will have to ask my husband," pointing to the little man.

"And where are you going from here?"

"To America," she said, "via Shanghai, but we won't stop in Shanghai as one never knows when there is going to be trouble with the Japanese."

"Good luck Madame, perhaps we will meet again."

"One never can tell," she said.

FIVE FAMOUS CRIMES

RECALLED BY FORMER SCOTLAND YARD CHIEF

These five stories are told by Sir Basil Thomson celebrated war time head of Scotland Yard. Each of the five crimes described in this series stood out prominently in its day. Indeed, each remains alive in England's crime annals even now because of certain legal or factual precedents or unusually intriguing circumstances.

II

The McNaghten Case

By Sir BASIL THOMSON—

AT 4 P. M. on January 20, 1843, there occurred a murder which resulted in a change in the procedure of the criminal courts in the United Kingdom. Edward Drummond, Sir Robert Peel's private secretary and a nephew of the chairman of Drummond's bank, was returning from a visit to the bank when he was shot in the leg.

James Silver, a police constable, happened to be going from Whitehall to Charing Cross when he saw a gentleman staggering on the pavement with his hand to his side and a man a few conversations with him in his cell, putting leading questions to him about the riots in Glasgow and the weavers in Paisley, in both of which places the prisoner said he had been.

On the following morning the inspector asked McNaghten what reason he had to give to the magistrate for his crime. He said that he would give a short explanation. To this the inspector observed, "You might have stated anything you thought proper to me last night, after the caution I gave you."

McNaghten then said that he was persecuted by the Tories. The inspector remarked, "I suppose you are aware of the identity of the gentleman you shot at," McNaghten replied, "It was Sir Robert Peel, wasn't it?" At first the inspector said, "No," and then changed his reply to, "We don't exactly know who the

Sir Robert Peel, Home Secretary and founder of Scotland Yard.

The case had excited enormous public interest, and there was a strong feeling that the verdict was wrong, as well as the judge's direction to the jury. The case was raised in the House of Lords and was referred by the peers to the judges, with the result that ever since that date, when a jury considers a prisoner to be insane and not responsible for his action, the form of the verdict should be, "Guilty but not sane," and the sentence should be, "To be detained during His Majesty's pleasure," which means detention in a criminal lunatic asylum, where the cases are regularly brought up for revipaces distant with a pistol in his hand. With great promptitude he tripped him up and disarmed him before taking him to the police station in Gardiner's lane. There the man gave his name as McNaghten.

It was hoped that the victim of the shooting would recover. The Queen and Prince Albert were deeply concerned and called for constant reports on Mr. Drummond's condition, but after the bullet was extracted it was found that there were internal injuries, to which the patient succumbed on the following day.

The case is interesting to us as an illustration of the way in which criminals were handled by the police in those early days. Inspector Tierney cautioned the prisoner and then had several gentleman is yet." The prisoner then asked that their conversation should not be repeated in court, but to this Inspector Tierney replied that he could make no promise; he had duly cautioned the prisoner.

The trial was a long one. A host of witnesses were called to prove the unbalanced behaviour of the prisoner for a long time past. Mental experts were called to give their opinions on the prisoner's responsibility, but they were all at one in considering McNaghten to be insane. The jury retired and returned a verdict of "not guilty, on the grounds of insanity." Accordingly the prisoner was technically discharged, but he was removed to an asylum for permanent confinement.

sion after a patient has completed a detention, in the case of murder, of twenty years, that being the length of sentence served by a convicted murderer whose life has been spared.

The McNaghten case is interesting to us in another aspect. The prisoner was, it is true, cautioned that anything he might say could be used in evidence at his trial, and the inspector then proceeded to question him. Great Britain is the only country in the world, I believe, where the police are forbidden to question accused persons after they have decided to prosecute them. The restriction was made in the interest of fair play to the accused, but it is apt to prove a fatal bar to the administration of justice.

THREE thousand silver spoons that fit into a hazel-nut shell, ivory camels small enough to pass through the eye of a needle and 25,000 other objects in miniature are in an odd collection of tiny things assembled by Jules Charbonneau of Spokane, Wash., U.S.A. The collection also includes a pin on the head of which is engraved the Lord's prayer, a feat which occupied an artist for twenty-five years. At the end of that time he went blind. Also in the museum is a Chinese junk with sails set, sixteen men on deck and eight port-holes behind each of which stand two men, with 257 Chinese characters on the bottom of the junk. This object was carved from the pit of an olive. Then there is a tiny electric toaster, half an inch wide and three-quarters of an inch long. The smallest Ford motor, a four-cylinder model which will run, is one and a half inches wide. It is only a fraction smaller than an operating model of the Lindbergh trans-Atlantic plane motor. Also there is a Bible verse written on a glass plate and framed by the eye of a small needle, but invisible to the human eye.

Latest Clock Has A Voice To Answer Time

SLEEPYHEADS may be awakened in the near future by a clock which announces in clear tones, "Seven o'clock," or whatever the hour may be. Such a clock has been developed by a communications laboratory. It has an odd caricature face and a "voice" circuit which will put the exact hour into words. It is synchronised with a nationwide time service. The clock may be used as a train announcer, with a microphone connected into the speech circuit for making announcements other than telling the time.

ROBOT ENGINE DRIVEN BY REMOTE CONTROL

This model streamline electric locomotive, built by a Japanese, is complete with an automatic braking mechanism and remote control drive.

AUTOMATIC train control is understood to be a feature of a mysterious robot locomotive model built in Japan. Streamlined, but of a design unlike any conventional locomotive, the details of its mechanism have not been revealed. It is believed, however, that it will be operated electrically by remote control and will be equipped with a braking mechanism which will stop it automatically if the rails ahead become dangerous.

About TOWN

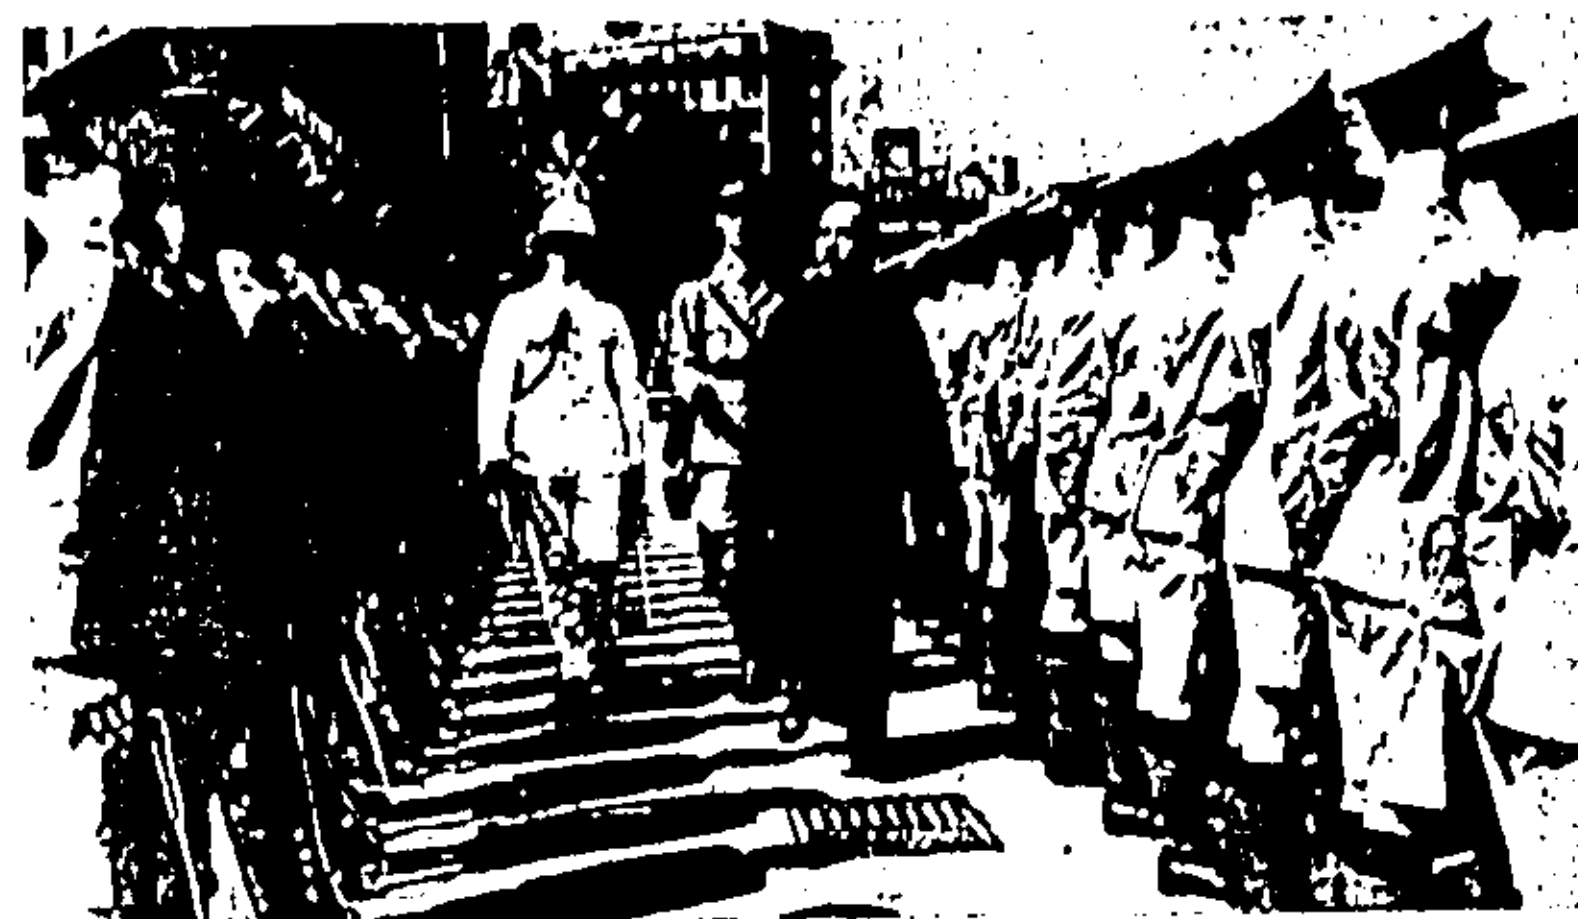

THE Statistical Office regularly publishes its columns of interesting figures, and just as regularly we look through them and feel that we have been duly enlightened. But afterwards comes a doubt. Each one of us has a pressing business to conduct, which we may call the business of life. A very important part of that business is buying what we need in the way of food and clothing and other necessities. Here in these tables of summarised statistics we ought to be able to find out how we are prospering in our purchases, and — as, if we spend less, we should have more to spend on the luxuries — how far we can launch out into extravagance. Do the figures really help us?

The Beaten Track

BESIDES our own doings we have a considerable number of friends and acquaintances with whose manner of life we are well posted. Is it not the fact that we and they have lived in much the same way during the last five years? We may ignore the very exceptional case of somebody who wins a really big sweep. Nobody in Hong Kong has won one of the really big prizes, and the little prizes do not change the regular routine of life. Another man may have lost quite a lot in silver when slumped, and that may affect the date at which he will retire from active work. It does not affect his usual mode of life. Yet the figures assure us that there is a big difference during these years in the wholesale prices of all the things that we and our friends consume and use, amounting, in the five years that have passed, to three-sevenths. The figures inform us that if we were buying wholesale we could get for four dollars to-day what would have cost us seven five years ago. In that case for every $700 we spend we ought to have $300 left "in hand or at the Bank" as the Auditors say in their reports. We should have saved enough to buy a house of our own. Most probably we have not done anything of the sort. Where has the money gone to?

Our Scale Of Living

THERE is a story of an American hayseed who returned to his home town with a great yarn. He had been passing a restaurant with a large front window when he saw Jay Could sit down to lunch. It occurred to him to wait and see what so rich a man spent his money on in the way of food, so he stood by the window and watched. To his amazement the millionaire contented himself with eating one chop — a moderation which seemed hardly credible. It is safe to say that if he was accustomed to have a chop every day he would not eat three chops on a day when he had done a specially good deal. The trouble caused by the fall in prices of foodstuffs can hardly be due to a variation of three-sevenths in the demand. Nor can it be due to a deficiency of supply, for that would send the price up — and in any case we know that farmers all the world over are hit by being able to sell only a portion of what they could produce. And it is no use blaming the rate of exchange, for the figures are based on the dollar throughout, and the dollar is as low as we can expect to see it. If it is due to an excess of supply there should not be so much hunger as we know to exist.

Bank Figures

ANOTHER set of figures that does not concern us so closely is the totals that are compiled of the transactions of the British Banks. In almost every case the same dividend is declared year after year, so it is a mistake to suppose that the shareholders are all drawing immense sums for their personal use, as some of the Hyde Park orators proclaim. But let us take one figure alone — the holdings of British Government Stock. This security has not been increased in recent years, so if the Banks hold more the public must hold less. The Bank holdings have doubled, from £300 millions to £600 millions. That must mean that the public is poorer to that extent. No one buys "gilt-edged" stock until he has amply provided for his own business requirements, so that stock will not be bought back for years to come at the best. And yet there is no equivalent rise in the loans and advances, possibly because there are fewer parcels of scrip to be deposited as security. We see a vicious circle disclosed, and the high price of the war Loan for example, which is quoted as a sign of solvency and recovery and prosperity, looks more like a sign of poverty. It is a pity that among all the writers who have dealt with economic theories — often with great brilliance — none has published a simple explanation of the meaning of figures which industrious clerks compile for our information, and which the newspapers publish as news of the day. It is quite certain that the general public does not know how to interpret them for themselves, and there dawns a disturbing doubt whether the experts themselves do.

Badminton Disappointment

SOME seven or eight badminton players formerly of the Fire Brigade Club, W. Stoker, A. L. Fisher, Miss M. Griffiths, J. L. Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. H. Claim To Colonies Voiced

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.—The question of the immigration of Polish Jews into Palestine is one of the problems which the Polish Foreign Minister, Col. Beck, intends to discuss with the British Government during his forthcoming stay in London.

Madame Tabouis of the Oeuvre, however, is of the opinion that the British Government will declare itself not competent to discuss the question, since Palestine is not a British Colony but a League of Nations Mandate. The British Government is also said to have asked Col. Beck to elucidate his recent statement that Poland is entitled to colonies and raw materials.—Trans-Ocean Service.

FARMING IN CHINA

CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM TO BE INTRODUCED

Scheme Devised For Kwangtung

NANKING GOVERNMENT TO AID ORGANISATION

(From A Special Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.—For 4,000 years China has been an agricultural country and about three-quarters of the Chinese people are farmers, while 60 per cent. of the country's revenues are derived from levies on farms. Owing to the present high standard of living, the periodical political troubles in the country, the inadequate and ancient methods of farming, and the floods and famines in recent years, farming in China has become absolutely depressed and it is extremely hard for a Chinese farmer to earn his living.

As a remedy to relieve this state of affairs, the introduction of the system of "co-operation" is very necessary. This co-operative movement has been applied to some districts in Kiangsu Province with success. It is reported that during the 21st meeting of the Kwangtung Provincial Government it was decided to introduce a farmers' credit co-operative system in the province. Mr. Wu Koon-ki has been appointed to organise the system, and the Departments of Civil Affairs, Finance and Reconstruction will each send a representative to form the Committee for this service. The Kwangtung branches of the Central and the Farmers' Banks will supply the capital for this purpose. It is stated that improvements in irrigation, farming, sericulture, fishing and other productive businesses will be conducted by this Committee.

P.T. PROBLEMS IN ENGLAND

Government's Plans Outlined

HEALTH AND NUTRITION PROGRAMME

London, Yesterday.

Intervening yesterday in the House of Commons on the Labour amendment to the Address, the Minister of Health, Sir Kingsley Wood, spoke of the Government's plans for dealing with the problems of physical education and nutrition. He said that people were living in England to-day longer than their forefathers, and it was their duty to see that those extra years were worth living. To be worth living the men and women who lived them must be healthy, both in spirit and in body. The House would have a full opportunity for consideration and discussion of the proposals for physical education, in connection with which the Government were conferring with experts in the medical profession and among social workers who had already so large an experience on the subject.

He foreshadowed that Parliamentary approval would be necessary for some of the proposals. The Government considered that physical education and development should be given a definite and special place in the structure of the national health system. The advisory Committee appointed on nutrition was going ahead steadily with its work. The Ministry of Health, at the desire of the committee, was co-operating with local authorities in a number of dietary surveys. In connection with the milk scheme in operation in schools containing over 90 per cent. of Elementary School children and additional provision in connection with material welfare centres, the Government had under examination means of increasing the effectiveness of the scheme and of extending still farther its scope.—British Wireless Service.

GEN. FRANCO TAKES STEPS

PROPOSED BASE FOR FUTURE ACTION

VIOLENT FIGHT RAGING FOR FINAL POSSESSION OF CITY

Avila, Yesterday.

The minutest plans have been made by General Franco for the immediate replacement of the authorities in Madrid after its capture. Whole sections of technicians have been organised to take over the running of the post office, trains, the police and public services. Lorries laden with food are standing by outside Madrid to relieve the food shortage.

Since the capture of Madrid will not end the war General Franco is planning for the safety of the city and the organising of it as a base for future action. Nobody will be allowed to enter the city immediately after the entry of the troops without a special authorisation. Accredited foreign correspondents only will be allowed to enter en bloc on a day to be settled by General Franco. Anyone disobeying these orders will be treated as a spy.

London: What is expected to prove the last battle for Madrid is now in full swing. According to Lisbon reports masses of African Infantry, supported by hundreds of armoured cars and tanks, are engaged in hand to hand fighting with the Government troops holding the front lines of the Madrid defences. The insurgent batteries at Al Coron and Getafe have been shelling the capital since dawn yesterday.

The Madrid broadcasting station has ordered the evacuation of the districts around the capital. Apparently the Militia are falling back to defend the positions in the barricaded streets. The insurgents' cavalry conducted a lightning raid in the Fuente Vallescas district of Madrid and reported that they found no opposition. Many white flags were visible on buildings in the outskirts of the capital.—Reuter.

SUBMARINE WARFARE

Governing Rules Accepted

IMPORTANT PROTOCOL SIGNED

London, Yesterday.

The protocol by which the contracting parties accept the rules which provide that in their action regarding merchant ships, submarines must conform to the rules of international law, to which surface vessels are subject, was signed at the Foreign Office yesterday by the Lord President of the Council, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, and the First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir Samuel Hoare, for the United Kingdom Government, by the Ambassadors in London of the United States, Japan, France and Italy for their respective Governments, and by the High Commissioners of the Dominions for their Governments. The Under-Secretary for India, Mr. R. A. Butler, signed for India.

The text of the protocol was later issued as a White Paper. The rules provide that, except in case of persistent refusal to heave to on being duly summoned or of active resistance to visit or search, a warship, whether surface vessel or submarine, may not sink or render incapable of navigation a merchant vessel without having first placed the passengers and crew and the ship's papers in a place of safety.—British Wireless Service.

CORRESPONDENCE

Overcrowding And Tuberculosis

(To The Editor, "Sunday Herald")
Dear Sir,—It is indeed terrible to see the increasing number of deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis reported by the local Health authorities periodically. This is partly, if not largely, due to the overcrowding by tenants in many parts of the Colony. One can only too plainly notice the stifling air and smell when visiting the most congested areas of the city, especially in hot weather. Because overcrowding is the simple way out of the difficulty it is often overlooked by the great majority of people. As a matter of fact it is contradictory to the laws of health in every respect. We are eagerly waiting to hear whether the Government will take measures to limit the number of tenants in each house so as to avoid the spread of the disease of tuberculosis to some extent.

A CITIZEN

URBAN COUNCIL

Watering The City Streets

At next Tuesday's meeting of the Urban Council Dr. R. A. de Castro Basto, pursuant to notice, will ask:—

- (1) Has the Government permanently abandoned the practice of watering the streets in this Colony?
- (2) Is it not feasible to resume it by the employment of water-carts?
- (3) If fresh water is not available throughout the year for this purpose, could not a mixture of fresh and sea-water be used instead?
- (4) If it is thought that water would make the streets slippery, is it not possible to flush them at night?

Correspondence relative to the appointment of the officers to act under Ordinance 8 of 1935 (section 2), and to act as Food Officers under Ordinance 18 of 1935 (section 2) will be considered, as will also applications and the usual returns.

ALLEGED ACCEPTANCE OF TWO CENTS BRIBE!

Schofield at the Central Magistracy with attempting to obtain a bribe of two cents, through Teo Wong-leung, from Laung Cheung a hawker, on November 3 and with misconducting himself as a police officer by attempting to obtain the bribe. Mr. W. A. MacKinlay appeared for the defendant, and the case was adjourned for a week. Defendant was allowed bail for $250.

Do You Dream Dreams For Your Children?

MOST parents dream dreams for their children and hope that they will enjoy greater educational advantages than they themselves have had. But such dreams may never come true so far as your children are concerned, unless you have funds available at the right time to educate them for a definite vocation in life.

A Confederation Life Educational Policy is a safe way of making certain that your dreams for your children will come true. If you want to know how this may be done, write now for particulars, or ask one of the Confederation Life Association's representatives about this plan.

MORE ARRESTS IN MOSCOW

STUDENTS DISTRIBUTE

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Berlin, Yesterday.
News has been received in Warsaw that 100 new arrests have been made in Moscow. These arrests are said to have been made in connection with leaflets that are being distributed by the hundreds in Moscow factories, sharply attacking the Soviet Government and declaring that its foreign policy is too weak, especially with regard to Spain. The appeals conclude with the sentence: "Support the only true Communist Party, the party of Trotsky and Zinovieff."

The printers and distributors of these leaflets have been found to be 100 students and workers, who will be transported to forced-labour camps in Siberia.

The Warsaw correspondent states that this incident only serves to demonstrate the growing hostility towards M. Stalin, and in this connection it is interesting to learn that M. Stalin's name is omitted from the great number of slogans being prepared for banners and placards for the celebration of the Soviet anniversary. Whereas his name was always predominant in recent years, this time emphasis is again laid on the name of Lenin.

An Anglo-Italian trade agreement, effective on November 16, signed by the British Ambassador at Rome, Sir Eric Drummond, and the Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, provides for the resumption of commercial exchanges and payments between the two countries and the gradual liquidation of commercial and other debts in arrears. The quotas on the basis of which the importation of British goods into Italy will be allowed are also fixed, and it is agreed that the British frozen debts in Italy, amounting to £2,250,000, should be repaid in sterling, as the original contracts were made in that medium.

The conclusion of the agreement is regarded here with considerable satisfaction, and, it is hoped, will lead to better Anglo-Italian relations. — Reuter.

INTER-SECTION HOCKEY

CIVILIAN FINAL REPLAY TO-DAY

MANY TEAM CHANGES

Another exciting hockey encounter should be witnessed on the Club ground this morning, when the final of the Civilian Section of the Inter-Section Tournament, between the Hong Kong Club and the Grupo Desportivo Argonauta, will be replayed. The teams shared two goals last Sunday morning after extra time.

The H. K. H. Club are making several positional changes, and V. Bond will be seen at left-back instead of on the left-wing, which berth will be filled by E. Taylor, a newcomer to the Club. Sommer will be an absentee, otherwise the team remains the same as before.

The Argonauta are also making several changes, Pinna playing on the right-wing, while Nolasco will move to the inside-right berth in order to give A. S. Xavier a rest.

The following are the teams:—
H.K.H. Club:—H. F. Shields; V. Bond and E. V. Reed; R. A. Bates, W. A. Reed and N. Whitley; N. A. E. Mackay, S. A. Fowler, G. E. R. Divett, B. I. Bickford and E. Taylor.
Argonauta:—U. B. Sousa; R. Xavier and E. L. Gosano (Captain); R. Marques, L. Oliveira and T. Alves; A. Pinna, F. Nolasco, B. Gosano, A. Angelo and L. Gosano.

KING'S WARDEN IS UNPLACED

FAVOURITES FAIL IN SMALL FIELDS

PERFECT DAY WINS IN FAST TIME

THE feature of the Tenth Extra Race Meeting held at Happy Valley yesterday was the brilliant riding of Mr. S. C. Liang, who scored three wins and a second in five outings, while Mr. D. Black had two wins, two seconds and a third in six races.

The racing on the whole was very enjoyable and the surprising feature was that, although the favourites did not have an altogether too successful day, dividends were on the low side, the biggest return being paid by Mr. S. L. Yuen who steered Tyne home first in the race for novice jockeys to pay $59.40.

Conditions for racing were as near ideal as could be desired and on a fast track Messrs. Chau Bros' Perfect Day, unofficially equalled Bobniak Star's track mark for six furlongs, but the crowd was not what one might describe as anything more than mediocre. Punters who were fortunate enough to select Tyne and Emergency Call in the "Daily Double" were rewarded with $297.60 each, and it is interesting to note that the first prizes in the cash sweeps were all over the $1,000 mark, although the "big" sweep prize was only $2,796.50.

So far as the owners were concerned, the honours were very evenly divided, no one stable scoring more than a single win. It was generally expected that Mr. Leo Frost would again be seen in the saddle, but he was prevented from riding through a business engagement and as a result Mr. Donald Black was the most followed jockey.

The first race of the day, the Surrey Handicap, saw both the favourite, King's Warden, and second favourite, Soldier of Britain, unplaced in a field of only six runners.

The field was sent off to a good start, Oak Bay going out into the lead, with Gladiator, King's Warden, Cossack's Beauty and Soldier of Britain following in the order named. On nearing the football stands Soldier of Britain went up to second place, Oak Bay still being in the lead. The same position obtained till the home stretch was reached, when Gladiator came up on the outside to win a great race. Meanwhile, Cossack's Beauty finished strongly to nose Soldier of Britain out of third place.

Favourite Runs Last

Like the first race, the Nullah Handicap saw the favourite, Bobniak Star, unplaced.

The field got away to a good start with Derby Day slightly in the lead, and as the race progressed it became evident that the result rested between this pony and Australian Boy, which was in close attendance, followed by Vixen Tor and Bobniak Star. Coming into the straight, however, Derby Day increased its lead, and the rest of the field were closely bunched. Mr. Black's fine riding, however, eventually won second place for Australian Boy, Vixen Tor being third and the favourite last.

Bear Claw's Triumph

Mr. Donald Black brought Bear Claw, a hot favourite, first past the post in the Hong Kong Griffins Cup to score his first win of the day.

Honeymoon Eve, the second favourite, was restive at the gate, but the field of four eventually got away to a very fair start.

Bear Claw took the lead right from the start and, passing the ed 11 starters, the race being confined to novice jockeys. It was yet another of those races in which the favourite (Valorous) was just nosed out of a place. Tyne came first to pay its backers $59.40, the biggest dividend of the day.

Bunched together at the start, the field soon spread out, with Tyne going into the lead, closely followed by High Honour, King's Bounty and Great Hall, the favourite being in the middle of the field.

When the Village Bend was reached, Tyne had established a comfortable lead, but Valorous and King's Bounty both began to move up, the latter to take second place from High Honour, while the favourite was fourth. They finished in the same order, Valorous just failing to place by a neck.

Record Unofficially Equalled
Perfect Day (Mr. S. C. Liang) unofficially equalled the record set up by Bobniak Star for 6 furlongs, its time being 1.17.2, in the Cantala Handicap. It, however, was out 5 lbs. under weight for inches and therefore its effort will not be officially recognized. The favourite, Racing Heart, was third, while Double Finesse (Mr. Pih) almost robbed Perfect Day of its first place.

Blandford went into the lead right at the start and was followed by Perfect Day, Streamline, and Double Finesse, with the favourite in the rear. After reaching the quarter-mile post, however, Perfect Day went into the lead, Blandford being second and Double Finesse third. The finish was very thrilling in that Perfect Day just beat Double Finesse by a short head for first place, while Racing Heart finished very strongly to take third place from Blandford.

Popular Star Fails
The Sussex Handicap was yet another race which resulted in the favourite being unplaced, Popular Star being the unlucky one

"DAILY DOUBLE" BETTING STATISTICS

Tyne And Emergency Call Pay $297.60 Dividend

The following were yesterday's "Daily Double" betting figures:—
1st Leg—High Honour (57), Jungle Jim (81), King's Bounty (103), Monoplane (15), Soldier of Peace (70), The Tiger (19), Tyne (61), Valorous (248).
2nd Leg—Balloos (6), Blue Ribbon (1), Cassius (8), Ebony Idol (1), Emergency Call (11), Estover (2), King's Parade (1), Old Star (14), Popular Star (16), Rugby Star (1).
The combination of Tyne and Emergency Call paid 11 backers $297.60 each for their $5 bet.

this time. Mr. Donald Black won a well-judged race on Emergency Call to pay his backers $22.00, while those who "spotted" him for the Daily Double were rewarded with the handsome return of $297.60.

Popular Star ran away from the start and kept the lead until the Rock was reached, and then Balloos, Old Star, Cassius and Emergency Call all passed it in the order named. At the Village Bend, and into the straight Old Star ran so well that it looked a certain winner, but at the Distance Post Mr. Black brought Emergency Call through with a great burst to win from Old Star, which had to fight hard to stave off a strong challenge from Cassius. Balloos finished full of running, but could only manage fourth place.

Zero Unplaced
The last race of the day, the Suffolk Handicap, resulted in Mr. S. C. Liang scoring his third victory of the meeting, bringing Pride of Tsingtao home in fine style, while the favourite, Zero, failed to secure even a place. Mr. H. C. Pih, on the second favourite, Gold Coin, came third, with the favourite fourth.

Mr. Black sent his mount out into the lead from the start and kept this up till almost the last quarter, with Gold Coin, Zero and Pride of Tsingtao following in that order, the rest of the field being bunched together behind. Coming into the straight Pride of Tsingtao shot in front and ran neck and neck with Diogenes, finally winning by a head. Gold Coin was only a short head behind the second pony.

Health-Giving Glass Windows

Now Being Fitted In Local Residences

A Glimpse At Corney's Factory

(By A Special Correspondent)

IT is a generally accepted fact that one of the most dramatic discoveries made by science in recent times is that ordinary window glass shuts out just that very part of daylight that is necessary to good health, but science, which discovered this defect, promptly set out to put it right and the result is the new health ray glass, or "Vita" glass as it is more popularly known.

The first thing that comes to mind then is that every house should have at least one room with windows fitted with this special kind of glass, and in this connection the public will be interested to learn that here in Hong Kong, quite a number of private residences have already been so equipped, thanks to the fact that Corney and the well-known firm of Messrs. R.

Corney and Company, carry large stocks of this particular kind of glass which, strange as it may seem, cannot be put down as "an expensive luxury."

This firm, however, only deals in "Vita" glass as one of the many side lines to its own extensive glass business, for in the Corney factory in Tai Hang, a very big business is carried out in silvering and beveling mirrors, in addition to the many other aspects associated with this particular line of trade.

Over Thirty Years Old

The firm was established over 30 years ago, and, thanks to the enterprise and energy of the present managing-director, Mr. P. K. Hoe, it has gone from strength to strength, and it is now a generally recognised fact that Corney and Company are not only one of the largest establishments of its kind in Hong Kong, but also in South China.

Situated at the far end of Tai Hang, the factory is a modern brick building and within its red walls is a hive of industry, the 100 odd hands working from 7 a.m. till noon each day and, after an hour's break for tiffin, they resume work again till the whistle at 6 p.m. announces the fact that the day's toll is over.

The factory is divided into six different departments, each under the control of an expert foreman, and of recent years as much of the work as is possible has been carried out by machinery and only the embossing and the other intricate parts of the business is done by human labour. There are a number of women employees whose part in the factory is to care for the silvering and embossing, and the most interesting section to visit is the leaded-light glass department where one sees huge sheets of glasses, of every shape and form, turned out in "all the colours of the rainbow." In this connection it may be interesting to add that the coloured glass windows in the Hawpar Mansion, on Tai Hang Hill, were supplied by Messrs. R. Corney and Company.

Young Encouraged

Like every other modern factories, Corney's is a place where the young people who show an aptitude for this particular trade are given every instruction and encouragement, and after a lad has served a year's apprenticeship he is ready to take his place amongst the fully-fledged workmen.

Electric-lamp shades, wall-brackets, centre-fitting and show-cases are turned out on a large scale and these have been, and are still being supplied to not only the Colony's leading public institutions, but also to most of the large private residences.

In the old days a large export trade was done with Shanghai, Manila, Saigon, Java and Bangkok, but, owing to the heavy duty imposed on these goods, the Company has now suspended this section of its business, though goods are still being shipped to Canton in large quantities, while there is, of course, a large business, both wholesale and retail, locally.

In addition to its own glass and glass-ware, Messrs. Corney and Company carries large stocks of all sorts of glass imported from England and America, including the armour glass, safety glass, sun-proof glass and fireproof glass.

the suit. In addition, South's play of the heart Ace without any hold-up or finesse had completely fooled East, and the latter therefore decided to shift back to diamonds as his last hope. He led the Queen and South now had the rest of the tricks, making four-odd.

South's line of play was praiseworthy from start to finish, the manner of playing the spade suit being the main features. East's shift at trick 2 was admirable, as was West's spade continuation after being allowed to hold the King, but West's slight slip in failing to signal with the heart 8, and thus aiding South in fooling East, marked the undoing of the defence.

GIVE AND TAKE

The play of many hands can be likened to a rough and tumble fight. Both sides take turns at giving and taking, and the side which gives the most and is forced to take the least eventually wins out. As in a free-for-all, science sometimes gives way to impulse. Both teams try to keep their wits about them, but sometimes in the excitement and heat of the moment they lose control.

In to-day's hand both the defence and Declarer made a series of brilliant plays. The defence finally weakened, however, and made the first slip, which enabled the declarer to fulfil his contract.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 H Pass 1 S Pass
2 NT Pass 3 S Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass

Against the three-notrump contract West opened his fourth best diamond. The East player was faced with a problem almost immediately. He could come up with the Ace and return the Queen of the suit; he could play the Queen and thus probably prevent a hold-up by the Declarer in case the latter had the King and no intermediates; or he could go up with the Ace and shift. After some thought, East very brilliantly decided, despite the fact that his partner had led the suit, to play the Declarer for some sort of double stopper in it. He accordingly went up with the diamond Ace and shifted to the heart Ten.

South was equal to the occasion. Without any hesitation, he went up with the Ace, thus giving the East player the impression that he had the Ace and King and did not fear the suit. Then he led the Queen of spades, from his own hand and West covered with the King. The King, however, was allowed to hold the trick. South knew he had to concede two spade tricks to the opponents and he preferred West's winning the first one so that his own diamond and heart combinations could not be led through. West, after being allowed to hold the trick with the spade King, was in something of a quandary concerning what to lead, but, marking the Declarer with the heart Queen on the bidding and also with some very sound diamond combination, he made his best continuation—an other spade. South, very cleverly, again refused to go up with the Ace, deciding to lose his second spade trick immediately. He reasoned that if he went up with the spade Ace and then led another spade, East would win the trick, and West, now being able to discard, would indicate which red suit should be played by discarding a card in the other suit.

At any rate, East won the trick with the spade ten, and now had to make his final decision. On the first heart lead, when the ten had been led, and South had gone up with the Ace, West had discarded the fourspot, fearing that to throw the eight might sacrifice a potential trick, since South had bid

Good Old Days At Sookunpoo Once Huge Tract Of Wasteland

Transformation Commenced As Recently As 1917

(By A Special Correspondent)

HOW many of the thousands of people who go down to Sookunpoo Valley every week to watch the different games that are played there, are aware of the fact that only twenty years ago this very popular venue for football, cricket, tennis and hockey was but one huge tract of wasteland, with little streams running at random and a few dilapidated huts, the only signs of habitation? Yet that was the case, and as I look back on those days, I can remember too that Caroline Hill, the home of the South China Athletic Association and the Radio Sports Club, was nothing but a thickly wooded hill.

Things have vastly changed since those days. Caroline Road, which now is so wide that it is considered by the Police as the best place for people learning how to drive motor cars to confine their activities, was but only a few feet wide, and the over-hanging trees so successfully kept out the sun that the place was in almost complete darkness soon after 5.30 p.m. and very few people ever used the road after then.

It was about 1917 or 1918 that Sookunpoo was "reclaimed," if indeed that word may be used here, and as the hill was being cut, the earth was dumped into the swamp, for it was no better than a swamp, and by the end of 1918, or early 1919, the whole place was transformed, and instead of a huge tract of wasteland, we had the Sookunpoo recreation ground.

Two "Pioneers"

In those days there were only two buildings in that district.

SOUTH CHINA A.A. ATHLETIC MEET

The 14th annual athletic meeting of the South China Athletic Association will be held at their Caroline Hill headquarters on Wednesday, November 11, when Mrs. T. H. King, wife of the Hon. Inspector-General of Police, has kindly consented to distribute the prizes. The sports meeting will commence at 10 a.m. and tea will be served at 4 p.m.

can still remember, was not always very pleasant, but there appeared to be quite a big demand for this particular kind of wood, so that was that.

I.R.C. Threatened

The Military authorities did not take possession of their part of the field until about 1920, but some time after that the very existence of the Indian Recreation Club, whose members were the first to use the new recreation ground, was threatened when the Army authorities requested that the whole area be granted to them. A number of meetings of the Recreation Grounds Committee were held to discuss the matter and finally it was ruled that the Indian community were making good use of the plot allotted to them and they were allowed to remain where they were. Owing to the uncertainty that prevailed at the time, however, the I.R.C. members hesitated to build a pavilion and a small matshed served as their clubhouse.

The New Era

The Tung Wah Eastern Hospital, the Electric Company Quarters and the First Church of Christ were non-existent then, and apart from the school mentioned above and the crematorium, the whole of the valley was enclosed by thickly-wooded hills. The road leading to it was in a very poor condition and after every heavy rainstorm it was practically impossible to get into the place without ruining a pair of shoes.

With the construction of the Tung Wah Eastern Hospital, however, a new era began for the Sookunpoo district. It was then realised that the road must be made suitable for motor traffic, especially for the ambulances, and things have advanced so rapidly that Sookunpoo has now been converted into a very ordinary piece of open ground. There are no more dark roads, fences made of bamboo twigs, or matsheds for clubhouses, except, of course, the football stands, and because of all this I, for one, feel that Sookunpoo has lost the greater part of its charm.

ADOPTED DAUGHTERS' REGISTRATION

SUGGESTIONS TO GOVERNMENT

The fifteen annual meeting of the Anti-Mui-tsai Society was held at the Y.W.C.A. last evening, when Mr. Wong Sam-kan presided over a gathering of about 30 members. In the absence of Mr. J. D. Bush, Hon. English Secretary, a review of the past year's activities was given by Mr. S. S. Fu, the assistant secretary, in the course of which he urged the necessity of enforcing the registration of adopted daughters, as otherwise there would be no difference between them and the ordinary mui-tsai.

Mr. Fu said that it was his experience that a great many mistresses taught their mui-tsai what to say whenever the latter were questioned by officers from the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs. The mui-tsai Ordinance, 1929, said Mr. Fu, permitted the owners of these "slave girls" to be called "mother" by them, and in this connection the speaker said that the Ordinance required amendment.

Chairman's Speech
During the first and second interview with the Mui-tsai Commission, Mr. Fu said, "Mr. S. C. Leung, our representative, made many suggestions, amongst them being the desirability of the appointment of a solicitor to take charge of all prosecutions under the Mui-tsai Ordinance. Mr. Fu then gave a summary of the cases dealt with by the Society during the year under review before calling on the chairman, Mr. Wong Sam-kan, to make his address, which was as follows:—

"It may be recalled that this Society was founded in July, 1921, and during this period, the members of this Society have done their utmost for the emancipation of mui-tsai. As a result, a good number of these unfortunate have been restored to their parents or set free. We may say, therefore, that this Society has not existed in vain, but we much regret to mention that there are still a great number of mui-tsai who remain in bondage through their owners' evasion of the law by representing them as adopted daughters, thereby avoiding registration.

"We are strongly of the conviction that unless adopted daughters are also registered, mui-tsai will always remain with us and the evil cannot be eradicated. The emancipation of mui-tsai has only been partially achieved, and we have still to struggle along to carry on the work. The Society welcomed the Mui-tsai Commission when they arrived in Hong Kong and our representatives duly appeared before them to give evidence.

Appeal To Members
"In this meeting, I wish to draw your attention to the following matters:—

Central District Burglary

NO ARRESTS MAKE

A burglar made good his escape last night with over 140 sets of artificial teeth, which he stole from the office of Mr. Harold F. Shields, a dental mechanic, who occupies room No. 15 on the fourth floor of Alexandra Building.

Receiving a call from the victim shortly before 8 p.m., the Central Police Headquarters despatched several Chinese and Indian constables, headed by Detectives T. Cashman, M. Flattery and W. MacKay, to make investigations. All entrances were guarded, while the Chinese detectives made a thorough search of the building.

According to Mr. Shields, when he returned to his office after a hockey game, he heard a noise in it. The office was locked. On making enquiries he discovered that his boy had already left the premises. He immediately telephoned the police, and after the door was opened it was discovered that a thief had visited the office, and had escaped to the roof through the window with the artificial teeth.

No arrest has been made, and it is suspected that the burglar had his way to the adjoining building and escaped down the stairs.

Mr. B. Greenberg, right, local manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer (China) Inc. is seen receiving the film "Pleasantly Jim," starring Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans, from Captain Selars of the C.N.A.C. flying-boat which arrived in the Colony last Thursday inaugurating the new airmail service between the Colony and Shanghai. The film commences its run at the King's Theatre to-day at 2.30 p.m.

LEAGUE CRICKET SEASON STARTS

INTERPORTERS GIVE GOOD DISPLAYS

CHAMPIONS HELD BY THE ARMY

THE cricket season proper opened yesterday with a full programme of League matches, the main feature being the fact that many of the Colony's leading lights revealed good form with either bat or ball. Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite (60) W. H. Colledge (50), and L. D. Kilbee (65), members of the last Interport team, showed good form, while the best bowling performance of the day was credited to F. D. Pereira (6 for 40), the former Interporter.

Kowloon Cricket Club, the senior champions, were held to a draw at King's Park by the Army and the Hong Kong Cricket Club, playing without T. A. Pearce, beat the Navy. The Indian Recreation Club, who are the holders of the Junior Shield, brought off the double at the expense of the Craigengower Cricket Club.

Marionettes In Old China

Their Origin And Story

Associated With Magic & The Supernatural

(By PHYLLIS JUBY)

THE little doll that dangles and dances from the hanging silken cord is not regarded in the West, simply as a means of entertainment, however grotesque; for the puppet in China has always been regarded as something connected with magic, the supernatural, something with a soul of its own: its symbol is potent. The marionette show is always given in big temple festivals and the man who shows it is a sorcerer. In the ancient days, many centuries before Christ, that gesture of making a puppet to represent the human was something important; the puppet was to be regarded almost as a fetish. When do we find the first mention of dolls that hung from a cord and moved?

At the time of one of the oldest festivals, when the Dance of the Twelve Animals was danced, some time before the Han dynasty, there existed the custom of hanging dolls, in the shape of a man and made from peachwood, to the doors by a cord. "At the end of the year, all business brought to an end, one drove away the spirits of pestilence in order to lead away the Old man, to welcome the New one and to welcome the lucky influences." Essential to the feast was a dance performed in the palace; the dancers were young boys, 120 in number and between the ages of ten and twelve. They wore a red cap and a black tunic and held hand-drums.

The main character in the dance was the Fang Slang Che, who wore a bear skin and had four eyes of yellow metal; his tunic was red and his lower garments red; he held a spear and a shield. There were, too, the Twelve Animals with feathers and horns. The boys at first chanted an imprecation cursing the Evil Spirits, then the dance of the Fang Slang Che and the Twelve Animals was executed: all went three times round the hall shouting, holding torches, and coming out to drive the Pestilences away. Then the figures in peachwood representing men were hung from cord on the doors.

The First Stage.
This, one might suppose, was the first stage of the marionette. The dolls used by the sorcerers and sorceresses were also made of peachwood, peachwood wherein was a soul supposedly incorporated by the magician.

The character for peachwood indicates that it was the wood of divination, and there are stories that explain to us why peachwood was always used for the making of these magic puppets. There lived two brothers whose mission it was to capture and control these spirits who do harm to people. The brothers dwelt under a peach-tree on the mount Tou Cho, by the oriental sea. They captured the spirits, chaining them up with ropes of grass and giving them to the tiger to be eaten. So people still cut peachwood to make dolls representing men and hang them up at the side of the inner doors, while they paint tigers on the main doors.

Another writer speaks of this mount Tou Cho, on the summit of which is a peach-tree with a circumference of 3,000 li; between its branches is a door by which come and go 10,000 spirits. And here it is, he says, that the two brothers live, capturing the spirits by means of grass ropes and giving them to the tigers. That is the reason why Huang-ti established the rite of the "season expulsion": he had a great doll carved from peachwood, tigers painted on the doors, and grass ropes to hold the doll that would drive away the evil spirits.

Mind And Matter

Dolls, which appear to us but frivolous and childish things, are to the Chinese so heavy with symbol that one of their greatest philosophers, Lao Tze, in all seriousness uses them to illustrate a point in his philosophy, Matter and mind do not form separate kingdoms, such is in China the common idea. It is one of the most important ideas in Lao Tze's system. He tells us of a comedy which took place when marionettes acted before King Mou in the Chou dynasty. The sorcerer who showed these puppets had them made of leather and wood, varnished and painted. The dolls were able to bow as men do and even to dance and to sing: that is because they had their viscera made of wood, and no aperture was missing. Were the kidneys taken out, they could no longer dance; were the liver removed, they could no longer see. With their five viscera and all the apertures, they could feel all the passions, they had the value of a man because they had a face. And King Mou was put into a state of great anger because these marionettes threw immodest glances towards his favourites! He would have put the sorcerer to death had he not taken the puppets to pieces.

A Charming Tale

These puppets can actually be traced to such a remote antiquity that we can look upon the historical anecdote supposedly marking their origin as but a charming tale. It is this: In the time of the first Emperor in the Han dynasty, the Imperial troops were besieged in a city by the Huns, whose chieftain, Mao-tun, took command of three sides of the walled city and placed his wife, Yin Shih, in command of the remaining sides. The troops had already begun to suffer the greatest privations from hunger and fatigue, when the Chinese general in command of the city managed, by an ingenious plan, to raise the siege.

Hearing that Yin Shih, the wife of Mao-tun, was very jealous, he ordered a great many wooden figures of women to be made, as like the living figure of the woman as possible, only perhaps more lovely. These he placed on the ramparts of the city opposite to where the forces of the lady were stationed, and by dangling them from ropes caused them to move as though they were really living, dancing and swaying with graceful gestures. Yin Shih naturally thought them living females, surprisingly attractive, and knowing her husband's disposition she feared that if the city were taken his very first concern would be these women, and in consequence she would probably lose much of her influence over him. She did not hesitate then to retire with all her forces and thus raise the siege.

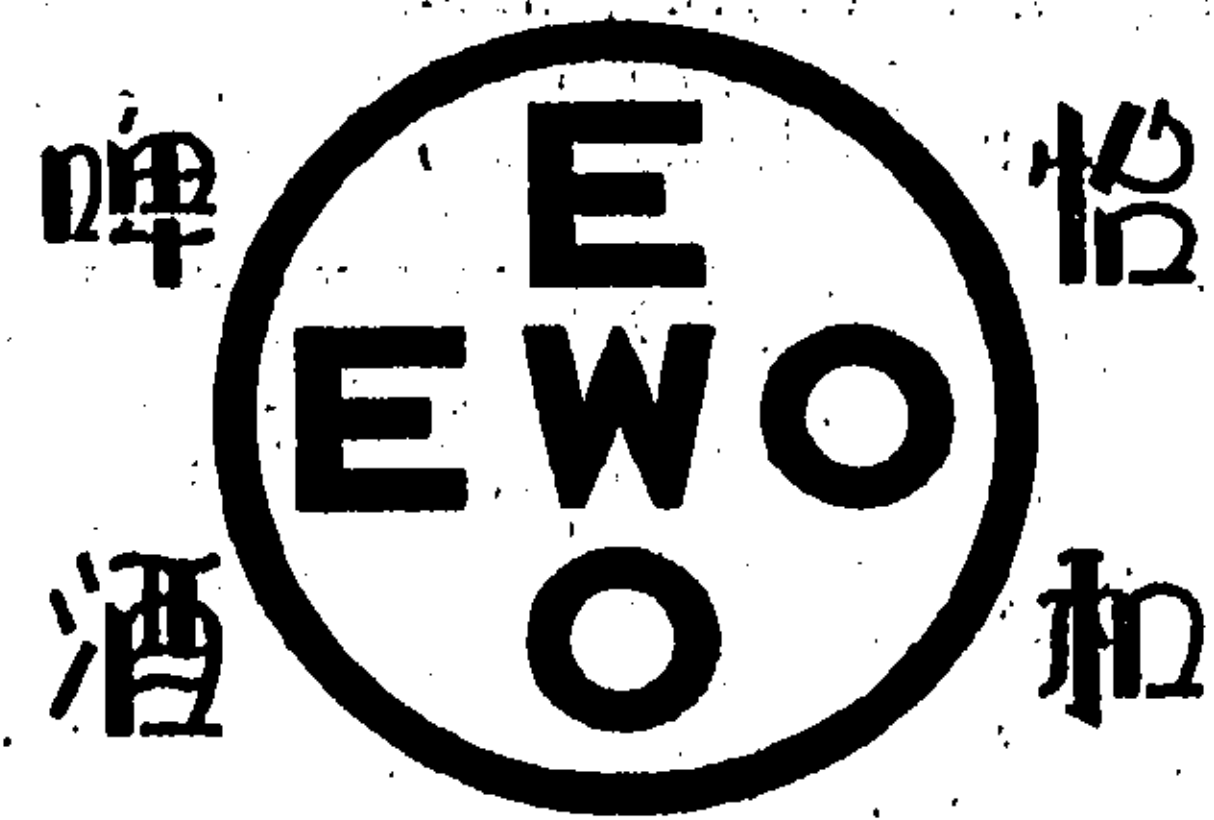

Entertainment

The marionettes only came to be regarded as an entertainment in the Sung dynasty, a dynasty so renowned that even the puppets were literary. Stories were selected from the popular "Romance of the Three Kingdoms" and other novels for the marionette shows and shadow plays. So Tung Po writes:

In streets small or large, small, untruly boys,
Scolded by their parents, were sad.
They were given money to go and hear the street story-teller,
To hear the stories of old.
They were stories of the Three Kingdoms.

Stories acted by marionettes. The marionette shows at this time were called by such names as "The Company of the Hanging Silk," "The Company of the Moving Ropes," "Shake the Thread Marionette Show," "Powder Exploded Marionette Show,"—this indicating how lively a show it was. And another, "Marionette Show of the Worship," shows us that, at that time as well, there were the shows connected with the temple.

In our day, though considered grotesque, the magic potency of the marionettes has not disappeared; the Buddhists use them in their festivals, giving performances in the temple courtyard. Even the people, who take them round the streets as fortune-tellers or magicians.

OUR PARIS LETTER

RICHNESS AND WIDE VARIETY OF IDEAS

FUR WHEREVER YOU CAN PUT IT

THE tumult and the shouting has died, the Paris dress shows are over, and we now know the worst—or rather the best. Very much the best. Such richness and wide variety of ideas that almost any woman can dress almost anyhow she likes and still look a la mode. I said almost because there are just one or two new styles which you must adopt, not merely because Paris says so, but because they are so enchanting. Take your morning wardrobe, for instance. There are two distinct silhouettes from which to choose. The simple tailored frock with straight skirt will always be a classic and always look right. But this year you can have instead a full flared skirt which will make your waist look so much slimmer. The shoulders of your dress must be broad and interesting, the neckline simple and high with small, neat collars, scarves or corded fastenings finished with "acorns" or pompoms. Paris loves these. Over your frock you can wear one, or all, of four things. Either a short jacket with a flared basque dipping down at the back; a full-length, fully flared coat, lavishly fur-trimmed; a tunic-length coat, slim waisted and full skirted (if your dress has a straight skirt), or, if you are brave, a Directoire coat with rounded, cut-away front, back like a man's "tails," huge revers and stand-up collar. But every coat, of whatever kind, must have its fur trimming, preferably a flat fur except on the very luxurious coats. Collars, cuffs, pockets, revers, hems, "frogs," in fact, fur wherever you can put it, in astrakhan, otter, American marten, beaver, leopard. Don't sigh for the unattainable fur either, because fur fabrics this year are little short of miraculous and have the whole-hearted approval of the most exclusive couturiers. Colours? Lovely, and such a change from black. Wine red first favourite, with medium green and smoky blue close runners-up, followed by red-brown, slate, nut-brown and violet. Fabrics have, mostly a roughish surface, woollens with knobs and knubbles and self-coloured stripes and wavy lines in interesting relief. There's a strong hint of plaids, too.

In the evening Paris wants us to incline towards the Empire period. But in a modernised version of it. The very décolleté corsage is there, the very high waist, unmarked by any belt or sash, but the supple clinging line, with a great deal of fulness drawn to the back into a suspicion of a train somehow brings it right into 1936. Difficult to wear unless you are figure-perfect and tall. But this high-waisted waistlessness is a very noticeable feature of a great many of the evening gowns, the ones which bow to the Directoire influence as well to the Empire. Don't despair, however. The tunic reigns almost as supreme in the evening as in the daytime and again being as freely interpreted as you wish. The ever popular, over-useful evening suit is still with us, too, and remains much the same as before, except that its jacket is slightly influenced by the excited flarings and fulness of the daytime jackets and coats. Another hardy perennial is the full-skirted "picture" frock. Your evening wrap may be three-quarter length or touching the ground in rich ample folds, but in either case it must have large full sleeves and all the fur you can possibly put on to it. Paris lays down no laws as to fabrics or colours for evening. All the world's your oyster, as far as they are concerned, but she does suggest that you use rather extravagant accessories—huge bunches of flowers and feathers, again more barbaric jewellery, velvet gloves, collars of pearls, anything that comes into your mind that's different and amusing.

AUTUMN COLOURS

BEETROOT is the colour to wear with watercolours green this autumn, or any mauve or plum shade will do. Brighter combinations generally will be popular for autumn and winter and you may combine the right shades from the "tulipe" group of mauves with those of the "flamme" range of reds, rusts, orange and bright yellows. In peaceful contrast there are the indescribable colours of deep water of the "lac" shades. All these are new and lovely.

The new parma violet hair is attained by a clever rinse over platinum. A pale gold or bronze shade is given a greenish rinse, quite exotic with the new autumn greens. Bluish tints are given to silver or steel-gray hair, cornflower to deep Mediterranean.

If your gown at night tones with your hair then you may put all the contrasting colours you know from the above groups

It's a Dressy Season!

DINNER FOR TWO

Consomme Julienne

FOR the soup you will need one medium-sized glass or tin of Consomme Julienne. Add a few drops of Lea and Perrin's sauce and a pinch of salt and pepper and the flavour will be greatly improved.

Devonshire Chicken

"Devonshire Chicken" is finely-cut chicken breasts served in a sherry-flavoured cream sauce on rounds of hot toast. You will need—

- 1 small glass of Chicken Breasts.
- 1 tablespoonful of McDougall's Self-Raising Flour.
- 1 tablespoonful of sherry.
- Milk, and a good-sized "nob" of butter.

Put the butter into a saucepan and melt it over a low flame, sprinkle the flour in, stirring all until a smooth paste is formed. Add milk a little at a time (still stirring) until you have a thick creamy sauce. Cut up the chicken breasts finely and add to the sauce. This will stand reheating, so you can make it before your visitor is due. Then, when you are ready to serve the meal, add the sherry, a good pinch of salt and a shake of pepper, re-heat and pile on two rounds of hot toast.

into a corselet waistbelt that shapes to normal, rises to Empire and falls again in a riot of reds, greens and purples with gold or silver lame.

Lemon Souffle

Cold Lemon Souffle can be prepared the evening before, and you will require:—

- 2 eggs.
- 2 oz. castor sugar.
- 1/4 oz. gelatine.
- 1 lemon.

Separate the yolk and white of the eggs and beat the yolks together with the sugar; then add the stiffly-whisked whites. Dissolve the gelatine in 1/4-pint of hot water and, when cool, pour into the eggs. Add the strained juice of the lemon and give the mixture a final whisking. Pour into individual glasses, and, if you are feeling extravagant, decorate with whipped cream.

Prawn Kings

Prawn Kings are a perfectly delicious savoury and can be made hours before. Spread small squares of Ryvita with cream cheese and perch a prawn on top. A tiny sprig of parsley or cress makes them look more decorative.

I am assuming that coffee-making is one of your natural gifts.

Such a meal would impress any visitor and, as you can see, leaves you very little to do after your guest has arrived. You can entertain in delightful freedom from the "kitchen worry" from which mistresses of large establishments seem to suffer.

little tricks

TO cure hoarseness, put a whole lemon into boiling water and oil for 15 minutes. Press out the pulp, taking out the pips, and mix with a quarter of a pound of honey. Take a teaspoonful when required.

TO remove inkstains from furniture place lemon juice on the spots, rub well and wipe off with a cloth.

A SLICE of potato will clean oil paintings without injury, and, dipped in baking soda, it will brighten silver or clean old knives.

TO remove rust stains, soak the spots in lemon, then cover with salt. Let stand in the sun for several hours until the stains disappear. Rinse thoroughly. Use only on white materials.

WHITE spots on the nails are caused by opacity of the cells. Rub the nails with powdered pumice stone moistened. As the nail grows, the spot will disappear under this treatment. Ridges in the nails may be rubbed down with the powdered pumice stone.

TO wash linoleum, never use soap, as it dulls the colours. Use a little milk in water. A mixture of half-warmed beeswax and half turpentine is good if rubbed in after washing.

CAMP FIRE DISPLAY DELIGHTFUL SHOW BY LOCAL SCOUTS WORK AND PLAY DEMONSTRATED

A MOST delightful entertainment, unique of its kind, was given by the combined Scouts, Girl Guides and Wolf Cubs of Hong Kong and Kowloon, when they gave their Camp Fire Display before a large gathering of spectators on the Hong Kong Cricket Club ground last evening. The show was under the distinguished patronage of the Chief Scout, H.E. the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, who attended and declared the Camp Fire open, and was accompanied by Lady Caldecott and his A.D.C., Captain W. J. R. Cragg.

His Excellency was met on his arrival by the Scout Commissioner for Hong Kong, the Rev. N. V. Halward, and other executive officers of the Boy Scouts' Association and conducted to the stage which had been erected directly facing the Cricket Club pavilion.

After the band of the Royal Ulster Rifles, present by kind permission of Lt.-Col. R. M. Rodwell and Officers, had played God Save the King, the flood-lights which illuminated the front portion of the Cricket Club grounds where the display was to take place were turned out, and suddenly starting out from the darkness there appeared the huge illuminated camp fire, most artistically devised and illuminated by electricity. His Excellency then said: "I have great pleasure in declaring this Camp Fire open."

The whole parade of scouts, Girl Guides and Wolf Cubs, who had marched on to the ground immediately after His Excellency arrived and had taken up their positions before the stage, then sang together in chorus and gave their various "yells" with the utmost enthusiasm. Among the songs given were the "Jemima" chorus to the tune (more or less) of the Soldiers' Chorus from Faust, the Round "London's Burning," sung by four separate groups, and a tongue-twister, "Oompah, Oompah, Gili, Gili Gili," followed by roars and yells of scouts in various parts of the world. These included a fearsome reproduction of the sort of noise Boy Scouts make in Africa; and with the arrival of a comic "horse" on the ground, everyone was put in a good humour.

BRIDGE BUILDING

The serious part of the display then started. First the audience was treated to a show of Wand Drill by the 1st Hong Kong Sea Scout Pack of Wolf Cubs, while simultaneously a rope-spinning display by selected Scouts from the 1st (Sea Scout) and 4th (Murray) Hong Kong, and the 1st (St. Andrew's) and 4th (Garrison) Kowloon Troops was given.

The combined Wolf Cub Packs then provided some torchlight figure marching which formed a pretty picture in the darkness, this item being followed by one of the most interesting in the display. It was a demonstration of a rescue from a shipwreck by the use of rocket life-saving apparatus, by the 1st Hong Kong (Sea Scout) troop. A "ship's mast" had been erected in one corner of the ground and the Sea Scouts quickly rigged up a breeches buoy, following the firing of a rocket distress signal from the "ship," and carried three "distressed mariners" to safety over the "foaming waters."

PHYSICAL DRILL

A splendid exhibition of physical drill and pyramids was then given by the 1st (St. Joseph's), 2nd (Catholic Cathedral), and 15th (Wah Yan College) Hong Kong, and the 3rd (Catholic), 11th (Wah Yan College), 18th (St. Teresa's) and 14th (Rosary Church) Kowloon troops. The boys performed intricate figure-marches to the music of the band and then gave a demonstration of physical drill and figure-building. This item was followed by a delightful episode enacted by the

BALLROOM DANCING COMPETITION

The finals of the ballroom dancing competition held under the auspices of the Health and Strength League were decided at the fortnightly dance of the League at the Hotel Cecil last night, and resulted in Mrs. Chelley and Mr. Major winning the competition. Mr. and Mrs. Ball were second. The other finalists were Mr. Lilley and Mrs. Ferguson, Mr. Surgenor and Mrs. McGuinness, Mr. Cooke and Mrs. Hollebek, Mr. McClay and Mrs. Merdeth, Mr. Elliott and Mrs. Greene, Mr. Weir and Mrs. Symth, and Mr. Duggan and Miss Scott.

FAR EAST HEALTH

Shanghai reported two cases of smallpox during the week ended October 31, and in the same period Calcutta notified 80 cases of cholera.

As the encircling forces of General Franco's insurgent army tighten a death grip on Madrid, frantic preparations are being made by the loyalist defenders as they enlist every able-bodied man for a last desperate stand.
